Mariner 6 Pictures Show Rugged Mars

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The odds against finding life on Mars lengthened today as scientists studied Mariner 6's closest-ever pictures of the red planet, showing a meteorite-battered surface much like the moon's.

Black-and-white photographs televised across 58 million miles Thursday night disclosed such utter desolation that only the most optimistic could hope for the presence of unseen living organisms.

There were huge and ancient craters, many with sharp-edged smaller craters inside; mountainous highlands, precipitous slopes, crack lines and scattered rubble—but no hint that the mysterious planet harbors life or ever did.

Scientists who plan to send surface-scratching unmanned landing craft to Mars in the 1970s were cautious in their comments on the possibility of life.

Said Dr. Robert Leighton, physicist-astronomer heading a study of the pictures:

"The camera system was never expected to provide an answer to the question of life on Mars. It is expected if there is life on Mars it would be in microscopic form or a low order of vegetation."

The photographs, many snapped with a telephoto lens as the 850-pound spacecraft swept within 2,130 miles of the Martian equator, covered a dark equatorial band some scientists have thought might bear vegetation because it seems to darken in the spring.

What the spacecraft's two cameras saw, however, were scenes like American deserts where dark mountain ranges rise from wastelands of bleached sand.

There were no clouds and no signs of a haze which some observers have theorized might be evidence of moisture in low places. Leighton commented:

"The blue haze that some say is on Mars may not exist. The surface features are very clear."

Scientists will get a second chance at taking close-ups of Mars when Mariner 7, five days behind Mariner 6, makes a similar fly-by Monday night.

Silent for several hours Wednesday after apparently being knocked askew by a small meteorite, Mariner 7 at last report was operating normally and scheduled to begin taking approach pictures tonight.

Move For Inquest Denied By Justice

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Chief Justice G. Joseph Tauro of the state Superior Court rejected today a request for an inquest into the death of Miss Mary Jo Kopechne.

Miss Kopechne, 28, was the secretary who drowned when Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's car plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island off the Massachusetts coast July 18.

Tauro's secretary said the justice based his decision on the contention that jurisdiction in the matter rests with the District Court system, rather than the Superior Court.

The District Court is one step below the Superior Court in the makeup of the Massachusetts judicial system.

The inquest had been sought by Dist. Atty. Edmund Dinis.

Justice Tauro said Thursday night that he first heard of the request from newsmen, and he described Dinis' announcement of the request as "bad judgment at the very least."

Tauro's decision today was announced through his office in Boston.

Earlier today in Washington, Kennedy told newsmen that he would "cooperate in any way" possible with the request.

"It's still rather unclear as to the nature of it," Kennedy said. "It's a legal matter," the senator added. "I plan to cooperate in any way."

Dinis is district attorney for the Southern District, which includes the Martha's Vineyard area where the drowning occurred July 18. Until now, he had stayed clear of the investigation, which led to a charge against Kennedy of leaving the scene of the accident, fatal to Miss Mary Jo Kopechne, 28.

Like the senator, Dinis is a Democrat. But he is not regarded as a member of the party's dominant Kennedy wing. He ran unsuccessfully for Congress last year.

Miss Kopechne was trapped in Kennedy's car when it plunged off a narrow bridge into a tidal pool on Chappaquiddick Island. Dr. Donald R. Mills, the district medical examiner, pronounced her death due to drowning.

Dr. Mills said he reported the death to Dinis' office, and reached an agreement that no autopsy was needed.

Critics of the senator have expressed dissatisfaction with his explanation of why he left the scene of the accident without reporting it to the police until the following morning.

In an interview Thursday night on the television program "The CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite," Ted Sorensen, a Kennedy adviser, said that as the senator himself had declared "his conduct that night is inexplicable."

"His conduct during those hours after the accident was fully summed up in the most humiliating kind of language in his presentation," Sorensen said. He referred to a telecast in which Kennedy asked his Massachusetts constituents to say whether he should quit the Senate.

"He would agree with you that he should have gone and gotten help that night now that he looks back on it," Sorensen said. "Of course he should have."

Interviewer Robert Shakne asked Sorensen why Kennedy crossed from his hotel in Edgar-

Nixon Begins Talks in Pakistan

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — President Nixon arrived in Pakistan today and began talks with President A. M. Yahya Khan which Nixon hoped would bolster relations with the onetime close ally of the United States.

Bringing the Asian portion of their round-the-world tour to a close, Nixon and his wife arrived from India in 100-degree heat. But most of their 21-hour stay was to be spent in the spacious, air conditioned old Governor's House that the British left.

Nixon met along with Yahya at Governor's House for an hour and 40 minutes. Then they were joined by their aides for a further 20 minutes of discussion.

Sources said the talks were wide-ranging, touching the topics of Asian security following America's withdrawal from Vietnam, recommencement of U.S. arms supplies to Pakistan and possible American economic assistance. Pakistan's tense relations with India were also believed to have been discussed.

At a sweltering airport ceremony, both Nixon and Yahya referred to the shift since the days when America and Pakistan were close partners in the anti-Communist "southern tier" across Asia that John Foster Dulles put together.

With the United States bogged down in Vietnam and showing a marked antipathy toward participation in any more Asian wars, Pakistan has recently been cultivating relations with Communist China, her big northern neighbor.

Yahya recalled Nixon's visit as vice president in 1953 and said:

"That was the beginning of a new era of cooperation and mutual collaboration between our two countries. The pattern of our relations has changed somewhat since then, but there is no diminution in our mutual regard nor, I am happy to say, in your country's interest in Pakistan's well-being."

Nixon in reply referred to "some strains in our relations" over the years and said:

"What we want to do on this visit is to restore a friendship based on the mutual trust which is so essential to good relations between two countries."

Crowds along the five-mile route from the airport to the Governor's House waved flags and cheered, but the intense heat reduced the turnout. The crowd was considerably less than the throng that greeted

Mrs. John F. Kennedy when she visited Lahore in 1962.

Nixon halted the motorcade once, to walk through a group of bobbing, weaving male dancers. With the dignified, swagger-sticked Yahya in tow, Nixon plunged into the waiting crowd, smiling and shaking hands.

As Nixon and Yahya began their talks, the visiting chief of state said in a statement that he looked forward to "our sharing in candor our respective assessments of our national interests and informing each other of our views."

Nixon said he wanted to reaffirm a basic feeling of friendship and respect between the United States and Pakistan that he said has survived both good times and difficult ones.

He pledged that the United

Arrested In Death Of a Girl

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A 22-year-old fellow Eastern Michigan University student was charged today in the brutal slaying of Karen Sue Beineman, one of eight young women found slain in the Ann Arbor-Ypsilanti area in just over two years.

John Norman Collins of Ypsilanti stood mute less than two hours after his arrest was announced. He was arraigned on a first-degree murder charge in Ypsilanti District Court. He was ordered held without bail.

Col. Fredrick Davids, state police director, said authorities were led to Collins by a report from an uncle who is a state police trooper.

Asked at a news conference whether Collins also had been questioned in any of the other slayings, Davids declined specific comment, saying only "investigation of the others still is continuing."

District Judge Edward Dake said a pretrial examination for Collins will be held within 10 days.

Davids, who took over all charge of the investigation earlier this week to seek a solution to seven unsolved slayings among the eight, said Collins "looks like the composite sketch" of a motorcyclist last seen with Miss Beineman.

The Eastern Michigan University coed vanished July 23 and her body was found last Saturday in a rural roadside ravine. She had been strangled and her face battered beyond recognition. She was 18 and had enrolled as a freshman last June.

Three others among the eight victims also were Eastern Michigan coeds. Three also were from the University of Michigan at nearby Ann Arbor. One was a high school dropout and another a junior high school student.

Until today, authorities claimed a solution in only one death—that of Margaret Phillips, a University of Michigan coed found mortally wounded in her off-campus apartment last July 5. A man is held on a murder count in that.

Collins is a nephew of Cpl. David Leik of the Ypsilanti State Police Post and Davids said it was a report from Leik that his

Welcome Kennedy Back To Senate Whip Duties

WASHINGTON (AP) — Edward M. Kennedy, his face reddened, the skin around his eyes puffed, walked back into the Senate chamber to reclaim his front row desk on the Democratic side of the aisle.

"Come in, Ted," said Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield. "You're right back where you belong."

With those words, Kennedy Thursday slipped quietly back into the routine of his position as Senate whip, his party's assistant leader.

He had not been seen on Capitol Hill since a July 18 auto accident in which a young woman riding in his car was killed.

Throughout the day, dozens of his colleagues—one after the other—reached down to shake his hand, drape an arm around his shoulder, whisper an encouraging word in his ear.

Before hand, on the Senate's white marble steps, Kennedy, inching his way through clutching newsmen and tourists, had answered the question everyone had tried to ask:

"No, he would not under any circumstances seek the presidency in 1972 and, yes, his decision was irrevocable. And yes, he was glad to be back.

Inside the chamber, past the line of Capitol policemen who ran interference for him at times, Kennedy slouched in his chair. For more than an hour, at one point, he folded and unfolded and refolded a slip of paper.

Later, after a series of votes marking the first time since the membership was increased to 100 that all senators were present for a roll call, he again talked briefly with newsmen.

Kennedy said he had been inclined not to seek the presidential nomination even before the accident which killed 28-year-old Mary Jo Kopechne and the controversy resulting from his failure to report the incident to police for more than eight hours.

Enough explanations had been made, he said, and he would issue no others.

Through most of the day, Kennedy was at Mansfield's side, directing party-line votes on tax issues that brought a significant victory to the Senate's Democratic leaders as the Nixon administration's bid to extend the surtax for a full year was turned back.

The surtax was extended for only six months and a Senate aide commented: "It was Kennedy's strategy that worked today. He wanted to link extension of the surtax to broad tax reform and now it looks as though that is exactly what will happen."

When the voting was over and the debate had returned to deployment of an antiballistic missile system, Kennedy visited his two Senate offices.

"No, this isn't a bad day at all," a Kennedy secretary replied to a question.

"As a matter of fact," said another, "it's about the happiest day we've had for a long while."

'Little Hoover' Panel Set Up For Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes signed 10 bills into law Thursday, including one to establish a third "Little Hoover" commission. All the bills become effective Oct. 13.

"Little Hoover" commissions of 1955 and 1965, both headed by former Sen. Francis Smith of St. Joseph, made many recommendations for modernizing governmental procedures. A number of them have been adopted by the Legislature or the chief executives of the state.

Other bills signed will: Set up a Missouri Federal Water Projects Recreation Fund.

Give the State Water Resources Board clear authority to deal with the federal government and similar agencies in other states.

Make it legal to call it margarine, instead of oleomargarine.

Set up machinery for paying a tax under protest and later getting it back if it is not due.

Allow railroads to incur the same bonded indebtedness as other corporations.

Raise the pay of county clerks in second, third and fourth class counties by $1,500 for handling voter registration.

Increase the pay of the St. Louis city collector by $8,500.

Raise the clerical hire fund of the St. Louis city circuit clerk.

County OK To Shelter Plan Here

Henry Lamm, presiding judge of the Pettis County court, said Friday that he had notified the state Disaster Planning and Operations Office that the county would participate in the community shelter program which was explained last week at a public meeting held in the courthouse.

Walter Clark, community shelter planning officer, stated at the meeting that the program would provide directions to families on what to do and where to go in emergencies.

The program, which had previously received approval of city officials, is estimated to cost about $6,000. It is 100 percent federally funded.

To get the program underway the Corps of Engineers had to make a survey of the county and report the available spaces and shelters to the Disaster Planning and Operations Office. This survey has been completed but the results have not been released.

Once shelters are selected, booklets will be printed indicating where the shelters are and which families should use the various shelters.

In the meeting last week, Clark estimated that it would take about six months to complete the program once approval had been received by both the city and county.

College Bond Issue Is Set For Oct. 7

Oct. 7 has been selected as the date to vote on the State Fair Community College bond issue which calls for the construction of seven permanent buildings, three parking lots, and other facilities on the campus to accommodate 1,200 students.

"The total cost of the project is to be about $5 million," said Fred Davis, president of the college. "We still haven't decided how much will be financed by the bond issue. Some of the financing will come from federal and state sources. We should know within the next ten days how much the bond issue will be for."

At a press conference on July 15, Davis stated that he hoped the bond issue would not be for more than $3.5 million dollars.

The college has called a meeting of all presidents and other representatives of key organizations in Pettis and Benton Counties to discuss the proposed building plans. The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the student lounge at the college.

College officials will conduct a panel and show drawings and other materials relating to the master plan for the new campus.

Citizens of Sedalia will probably be voting on the proposed city charter in October also, according to Mayor Ralph Walker. The exact date for the charter election will have to be set by the Charter Commission, Walker said.

"We will probably vote on the charter before we vote on the proposed annexation to the city," Walker said. "This way we can avoid some red tape of going through the Circuit Court for approval."

Another election that voters may face soon will be an election to replace Councilman Vern Masters of the second ward who resigned, effective last Monday, because he is moving out of the city. Walker said a decision on whether an election would be called would probably be made at next Monday's pre-Council meeting.

Hearnes and Lawmakers Discuss Special Session

awake night," he told friends recently.

The problem is that when the Legislature meets in its annual budget session next year, it will face the urgent necessity of raising at least $90 million in new revenue, anyway you figure it. That is the conservative estimate. Others range up to $114 million.

The state is already a year behind in new capital improvements at state colleges, universities and hospitals because the 1969 Legislature appropriated no money for this purpose.

In addition, the 1970 Legislature will face the immediate problem of raising $35 million more to finance the increased school foundation formula it adopted this year. It calls for a $35 million a year boost each year for four years.

A controversial cigarette tax increase was passed this year to raise about $31 million for the first year with the rest to be made up from existing balances. There is no money in sight for this purpose next year.

Even though the money needs will get sharper as time goes on, the governor feels it would be useless to call a special session that would cost about $250,000 unless the votes can be lined up to get revenue bills through the senate.

This year his revenue program was defeated by the adamant opposition of Sen. Earl R. Blackwell, D-Hillsboro, the Senate President Pro Tem, and his "Young Turk" faction. They had a bare majority but it proved enough to scuttle the governor's program.

It is not known what effect Blackwell's marriage and divorce troubles might have on his Senate leadership.

Many Things Make Life A Pleasant Experience

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Things that make life worth living: Running down a rainy street hand in hand with someone you love ... The opening door of home after a long day at work ... Lying in bed at night and watching the strange patterns of light and dark made on the ceiling by cars passing outside ... Being patted awkwardly on the face by the fumbling fingers of a small child.

The feel of corduroy cloth and the gnarled bark of old oak trees ... The gleam of brass and old silver candlesticks ... Going on a picnic and coming back safe from a war ... Watching a brilliant summer lightning and thunder storm from a sheltered place ... Having someone else volunteer to do the dishes after a hearty meal.

Playing catch with a teenager and finding you're still able to hold on to the fast ones ... Entering any room where you know you'll be welcomed by someone you want to be welcome to ... Taking the last pot of the evening and leaving the game a winner ... Passing an annual physical examination that this year you feared you'd flunk for sure ... Paying an installment on a mortgage—just once—three days ahead of the due date.

Pigeons getting crumbs from pious old ladies on the steps of a cathedral ... Saucy squirrels seeking handouts in a public park ... The sound of running water and the sight of falling stars ... The historic ritual of scratching your initials with a tree branch on a page of fallen snow ... The wavering path of a breeze across a field of ripening wheat.

Poking around amid the half-forgotten treasures in the attic ... Coming across an old love letter and dropping everything to read it ... The stern, self-conscious look on yesterday's faces in the old family photograph album ... How odd will your own face look to the eyes that will gaze upon it some far tomorrow?

The placid acquiescence of elderly faces, no longer afraid of death or time ... The smell of frying bacon ... The scent of a clover field on a dewy morning ... The uncurling grace of a cat rising and stretching herself ... The feel of clean sheets ... A friendly note from the boss saying he'd been watching your work lately and was glad to see that you were at last doing some of it. Also in the note: a pay hike.

Chopping kindling wood for a home hearth ... Giving a graduation present to a high school girl, and being told by her in tears that it was the very thing she had most hoped for ... The excited squealing of tenement children taking a street shower from a fire plug ... Awakening in a bedroll at midnight on a mountainside, surrounded by all the awesome glory of the universe, and talking your heart out to that lonesome stranger, God.

Wants Nixon Home Kept by Government

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Gov. Ronald Reagan proposed Wednesday that the federal government buy the house President Nixon was born in and make it a national historic site.

"Preserving the Nixon home is in the national public interest," he said. The home is in Yorba Linda, about 20 miles northeast of Long Beach.

His proposal, forwarded to Nixon himself, was based on a study by the State Parks and Recreation Department, which estimated it would cost $100,000 to restore the home and surrounding property to their original condition.

Improvements Bill Includes a Museum

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Ohio Senate Finance Committee amended a capital improvements bill Wednesday to provide $500,000 for a Neil Armstrong Museum in his home town, Wapakoneta.

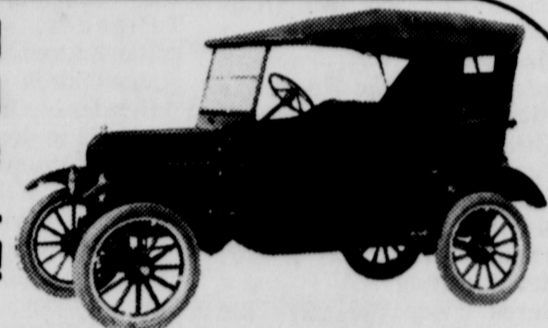

Proponents of the project to honor the first man to walk on the moon hope to raise an additional $500,000 through private donations.

Serving as teacher assistants are Miss Becky Wendt, First Christian; Miss Jamie Dickman, Sacred Heart; and Miss Ann Labahn, Calvary Episcopal.

Other staff members are: Mrs. Stella Chism, Taylor Chapel United Methodist, refreshment chairman; Mrs. John Erickson, L.P.N., Wards Memorial Baptist and Mrs. T. J. Norris, R. N., Wesley United Methodist, nurses; Miss Teresa Moore, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, nursery chairman for children of teachers; and Miss Cindy Ellison, and Miss Janet Rorick, United Church of Christ, nursery assistants.

Transportation for the students will be provided by the Cosmopolitan Jr. Women's Club.

Lunar Landing Raises Theological Questions

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Apollo 11 lunar landing has aroused new interest in such "space theology" questions as the implication for earthly religions should intelligent life be found on another planet.

Would such creatures know about God?

Roman Catholic theologians interviewed here seem agreed they would.

Would Christianity have an obligation to send missionaries to preach the gospel and convert the extraterrestrial creatures?

Here there is debate.

"My first reaction to anything like that would be that the Christian revelation has been given to the earth," said the Rev. John Long, a Jesuit and a member of the Vatican Secretariat for Christian Unity.

"I can see a relation between God the Creator and other forms of life, but the relation would not necessarily be the same as found on earth."

Father Long, however, explained that the early fathers of the church, men such as St. Augustine in the West, and St. John Chrysostom in the East, were divided on the question of Christ's relation to all creation.

"The Western fathers say Christ's coming hinged directly on the fall of man," said Father Long. "In the Greek fathers' tradition, the coming of Christ is not conditioned by the fall of man but is part of the whole plan of Creation."

He said that Eastern theological tradition, much more than the Western one, leaves room for a relation between Christ and extraterrestrial creatures.

Pope Paul's own space expert, the Rev. Daniel K. O'Connell, head of the Pontifical Academy of Science and of the papal observatory at Castel Gandolfo, commented: "All one could say is that Christ is the supreme point of Creation. Any extraterrestrial intelligent life would have to come under the Creator, naturally, and under Christ as God."

"If they were intelligent, they would have to recognize their Creator, but how much more than that we don't know."

It was as if the Roman Catholic Church would have to regard other planetary creatures as the objects of missionary efforts.

"I simply don't know," he said.

Deaths from uterine Cancer have been cut in half in 30 years with the help of the Pap test, says the American Cancer Society.

Rev. Appleton On Both Sides In Middle East

NEW YORK (AP) — On either side are the guns, the fury and in the middle is the Most Rev. George W. Appleton, his duties, his problems and his compassion extending on both sides of the conflict.

"It causes awful tensions of mind and heart," he said. "It's a unique situation, and a jolly difficult one to hold in balance."

Archbishop Appleton, the forthright, white-haired Anglican primate of Jerusalem, who presides over churches both in Israel and Arab areas, said he gets "Plenty of pressure" from both sectors of his flock.

But he sees this as an opportunity, not an obstacle. "Most churches in the Middle East haven't taken enough initiative for peace," he said. "We've got to help find a way for living together there."

Installed in his unusual post four months ago, the archbishop said he's not "anti-anybody" in the bitter, prolonged struggle. "I'm pro-Arab and I'm pro-Israel, and for the sake of both, I'm pro-peace."

After extensive back-and-forth visits and conversation on both sides of his ecclesiastical region, he said he sees the outline of the necessary features for a settlement, and also signs of tempering attitudes.

"The Arabs are beginning to realize that Israel is a fact, that she's there to stay," he said in an interview while on a four-day consultation here with officials of the Episcopal Church, the American wing of the worldwide Anglican Communion.

He discounted the possibility of the present sporadic clashes expanding into a full-scale war in the near future, saying: "The present shooting is not meant, on either side, to provoke war. It's a manifestation of the seemingly irresolvable frustrations and resentments, a continuing warning, one to the other, of military strength."

"It's also a kind of morale builder to show that one's own nation is capable of taking military measures. But I don't think there'll be another war in the next year or so. There may be after that, however, unless we find a peaceful solution."

Archbishop Appleton, 67, a bespectacled, slightly stopped British churchman who served for 16 years in Burma, three in India and six in Australia before taking the Church of England see in Jerusalem, urged a three-point basis for Middle Eastern peace, including: Arab recognition of the state of Israel and a guarantee of the security of its borders; withdrawal of Israel from most of the territory taken in the 1967 war, and agreed steps on both sides to solve the refugee problem.

"These are the three conditions necessary for peace," he said. "Otherwise, we will go on in the present dangerous situation."

As for Jerusalem, now fully held by Israel, he said it was in a special category, distinct from other areas taken in the 1967 war, and the dispute over it could best be solved by a joint Arab-Jewish administration of a shared, undivided city.

Archbishop Appleton presides over five dioceses, each headed by a bishop, and a membership totalling about 162,000 in seven Middle Eastern countries, about 2,000 of them in Israel.

Will Not Lift Ban On Oil Operations

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — California will not lift its ban on oil drilling in the waters of the Santa Barbara Channel, although some officials say the state could lose $10 million a year.

The State Lands Commission decided Thursday to reject a staff recommendation that the ban be lifted. State Finance Director Caspar W. Weinberger, a commission member, said there still is no guarantee that another leak will not develop.

Drilling within the three-mile limit was halted in January after a massive leak developed at a well being drilled on a federal lease farther out to sea. The huge oil slick blackened miles of beaches.

The commission directed its staff to study the feasibility of joining federal agencies in a joint operation to handle drilling and production from both jurisdictions.

The state controls operations within three miles of the shore. The federal government controls everything beyond that.

'Restless Ones' Will Be Shown At Area School

The motion picture "The Restless Ones" will be shown at 8 p.m. Sunday in the all-purpose room at LaMonte High School.

The feature-length film deals with today's teenage crisis. The 1963 Billy Graham Los Angeles Crusade provides the background setting which is woven into the story pattern.

Screen writer James Collier brings into focus the contemporary plight of both teenagers and parents. As one reviewer said, "Here is a picture that tells the world the truth and comes up with an answer, not an easy answer, but an answer from beyond us."

This is a penetrating motion picture that dares to provide an answer to youth's relentless search for reality. The public is invited to attend.

Church to Celebrate Ninety-Fifth Birthday

The LaMonte Baptist Church will observe its 95th birthday this weekend. The church was organized in 1874 with the assistance of the County Line Baptist Church.

The church was originally located in the northwest part of LaMonte but just before the turn of the century it was moved two blocks south of the railroad tracks across from the post office.

In 1961 the church moved to its present location one block north of Highway 50. In 1965 an educational wing was added to the church.

The current membership numbers 300. The Rev. Gary Taylor has served the church since 1966.

A basket dinner will be held at the church Sunday following the 10:45 a.m. service.

Women Membership For The Yale Club

NEW YORK (AP) — Only a handful of Yale men turned up Wednesday to reverse a long-standing policy by opening the Yale Club of New York to women.

By a 35 to 15 vote—the club has 6,000 members—the men of Yale extended to women graduates and faculty members a few of the privileges of membership. But only a few.

Women will have access to one dining room, a small sitting room and the boarding rooms. They are still barred from most dining rooms, the bars, the squash courts and the swimming pool.

"There will be no end to the privileges these new women will seek once we let them in," one member cautioned. The New Haven, Conn., university will enroll women undergraduates this fall for the first time.

Program Speaker

The Rev. Father Charles Pfeiffer, of the St. Patricks Church, will be the speaker on the KDRO, 8:45 a.m. Morning Devotional program for the week of August 4-8. The program is sponsored by the Sedalia-Pettis county Ministers Association.

Midnight Curfew Follows Accidents

FT. CARSON, Colo. (AP) — A midnight curfew has been ordered at this Colorado Army post, precipitated by auto accidents last weekend that killed eight men.

Maj. Gen. Roland M. Gleszer, commander of the post, applied the curfew to all soldiers rated E5 or below—about 11,000 men.

Accounting Procedures Tightened

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The state commissioner of agriculture, Dexter D. Davis, said Thursday he is beginning this month to keep accounting records with a business machine procedure.

The move has been considered for some time, he said, but it was speeded up after State Auditor Haskell Holman was critical of the record keeping by his department.

Davis said the first division in the department to switch to improved accounting procedures will be the Grain Warehouse Division. The other nine divisions will be added as experience qualifies his staff for the work.

The auditor's report said the divisions kept their accounts separately and used four or five different methods. Heavy turnover in personnel resulted in lost or inadequate records.

Holman advised that "good accounting records, currently maintained, rarely need staff interpretation for they are their own spokesman or fiscal agent."

Prisoner Hijacks Airliner

MIAMI (AP) — A prisoner under escort by two federal officers carried out a bizarre bid for freedom Thursday by pressing a razor blade to the throat of a teenage stewardess and hijacking a jetliner with 131 persons aboard to Cuba.

Trans World Airlines officials said they were unaware the passenger identified on their rolls as "L. Perry" was a prisoner until after he left the Boeing 727 at Havana's Jose Marti Airport.

In Pennsylvania, authorities said Lester Perry, 32, boarded an aircraft in Scranton with two federal officers who were escorting him to a California prison. They changed to TWA in Pittsburgh.

U.S. Marshal William Lavin and a prison guard, Joseph Hart were not available for comment when the plane returned to the United States.

The hijacking developed over Tulsa, Okla., as the jet flew westward on Flight 79 from Pennsylvania to Los Angeles. Stewardess Deborah Sullivan was the first to come in touch with the hijacker.

"He put a razor blade to my throat and told me to go into the cockpit," the 19-year-old red-haired stewardess said in Miami.

She said the hijacker also had picked up a wine bottle and held it and the blade, still pressed to her neck, for more than an hour as the jet flew south to the Gulf of Mexico and then to Cuba.

Thursday's hijacking was the 37th time this year an aircraft has been diverted to Cuba. There have been seven unsuccessful attempts.

Two skyjackers, one of whom failed in an attempt to force a Delta Airlines jet to the island nation, were sentenced to prison terms Thursday in U.S. District Court in Miami.

house had been "disturbed" that led to Collins' arrest.

Collins had access to Leik's home, while the latter was on vacation, and had been feeding the corporal's dog while he was gone. Leik returned from vacation two days ago.

David refused to say how Leik's home had been "disturbed," saying that involved evidence and he did not want to prejudice the case. David also said Collins "had access to motorcycles" and had been under surveillance even before Miss Beineman's body was discovered.

Some law enforcement officers have expressed belief at least some of the unsolved slayings are related, although there is no proof of this.

David said Collins would be arraigned today on a first-degree murder charge in Miss Beineman's death and disclosed he was arrested Thursday night at the State Police Crime Laboratory in nearby Plymouth, where Collins was being questioned in the presence of his attorney.

David said Collins completed his third year at Eastern Michigan University here in June, but did not enroll for the summer session and so far as he knew was unemployed.

Driver Missing

The Highway Patrol is looking for the driver of the over-turned 1966 Ford Falcon (above) which was discovered about 10:30 p.m. Wednesday near the east end of the dual-lane highway on U.S. Highway 50, just west of LaMonte. The driver or any passengers in the vehicle could not be located following the accident.

Accidents

A 1959 Ford driven by George Wayne Bartlett, 16, 512 North Stewart, and a parked 1957 Chevrolet owned by Jerry Wayne Stotts, 18, Green Ridge, were involved in an accident in the 1600 Block of South Ohio at 4:13 p.m. Thursday.

The right rear of the Ford and the left side of the Chevrolet were damaged.

Two persons were injured in a truck-trailer accident one mile east of Route J on I-70 about 2:50 p.m. Thursday.

According to the Highway Patrol a 1968 IHC truck driven by Rudolph Kohrs, 37, Cole Camp, collided with a 1962 Freuhauf trailer parked on the shoulder. Kohrs told Trooper Jim Klug, investigating officer, that the right front tire blew out on his vehicle, causing the accident.

Gladys Kohrs, 40, wife of the driver of the truck, and Larry Kohrs, 8, were both taken to Bothwell Hospital for treatment. Gladys Kohrs sustained a laceration to her forehead and left leg while Larry Kohrs sustained a large laceration to his scalp. They were both treated and released.

Police Report

Mrs. Ralph McCarty, 821 South Barrett, reported to police someone took the lids from two garbage cans at the above address sometime Wednesday night.

Florence Elliott, 1320 South Warren, reported to police someone took a wrought iron chair from the above address, broke the legs off it and left it in the street. She reported that this is the second time this had occurred.

Murill Aldrich, 2803 Clinton Road, reported to police someone took a dog, a rooster, six eggs and a cat from the above address during the past ten days while he was gone at nights.

One car was reported stolen, and later recovered, and six other vehicles damaged, in an incident on the Rival Manufacturing Co. parking lot bordering the 400 block on East 17th just after midnight Thursday.

The stolen car, a 1961 Chevrolet owned by Herbert Sullivan, Route 2, was used in an attempted get-away, but was recovered nearby.

According to the police account of the incident, officers were notified shortly after midnight that someone was tampering with cars on the lot and proceeded to the site. On arrival the officers stopped their car in the driveway.

The officers reported two boys were looking under the hood of a car as the police car arrived. The boys jumped into the car and came out of the lot without lights, drove between the police car and the fence, through a ditch and left.

Officers gave chase to the 1700 block on South Lafayette, where the car stopped. Two boys ran away from the stolen car, a 1961 Chevrolet. Later a suspect, Lonnie Reeves, 1209 South Montau, who is being held by police, walked up to the police car and gave himself up. An item on his person was tentatively identified as coming from the glove compartment of a vehicle on the lot which had been vandalized.

Nixon

States will continue to give strong encouragement to Asian development but he said, "Asian hands must shape the Asian future."

Economic aid, he said, must "encourage self-reliance, not dependence." And must be related to "the total pattern of a nation's life."

The U.S. president also took approving note of Pakistan's participation with Iran and Turkey in the Regional Cooperation for Development Organization.

"It is our hope," he said, "that Asians will work more closely with each other in a variety of constructive bilateral and regional projects."

The Pakistanis are prepared to revive previous warm relations with Washington if the Americans will resume arms supplies to them. The Pakistanis became disenchanted with the United States when Washington cut off arms sales to both India and Pakistan during their 1965 war. Any renewal of sales to Pakistan would anger India, and the Nixon administration is anxious to maintain good relations with the Indians also.

Pakistan enjoys a special position in both Asian and world politics as one of Communist China's friends.

Yahya, 52, visited Peking and met Mao Tse-tung and Chou En-lai when he was commander in chief of Pakistan's army, before he replaced President Mohammed Ayub Khan last March 25. Yahya's chief aide, Air Marshal Nur Khan, has just returned from a visit to Peking, and said then that Pakistan would maintain close ties with Communist China.

Leaving India, where he spent 22 hours, Nixon said his visit to New Delhi had given him "a greater confidence than ever before" about the future of India. The President said his talks with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and other Indian leaders had been "most helpful in establishing a new channel of communication, a new attitude with regard to the relationships between our two countries, for working together more effectively than in the past."

Nixon and his wife leave Lahore Saturday morning and fly to Romania for the first visit by a U.S. president to a Communist country since President Franklin D. Roosevelt went to Yalta in 1945.

Donnie Brownfield, 20, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Brownfield, 1320 East Fifth, has enlisted in the National Guard and is presently stationed at Fort Bragg, N.C. A member of the Second Battalion, First Basic Combat Training Brigade, Brownfield is scheduled to begin training in Book's and Baker's School in Virginia in September.

Kiwanians See Slides Of London

Colored slide views of historic spots in London were shown to Sedalia Kiwanians by Wray and Clay Schroeder, Sedalia businessmen, at the club's meeting in Bothwell Hotel Thursday noon. Wray gave the narration. The scenes were part of those taken on a tour by the brothers through eight European countries.

Robert Gardner was program chairman, introducing the Schroeders.

President Roy Brown asked members to stand for a moment of silent prayer in memory of L. A. Pharris, former past president and lieutenant governor.

A roll call was taken for the annual Kiwanis Ladies Night summer picnic which will be held at the Parkhurst Tiki House at 7 o'clock Thursday night, August 7, to which guests may be invited.

Invocation was by Robert Horton who also received birthday greetings from the club. Abe Rosenthal led the singing with Mrs. Lillian Maynard accompanist.

Charles E. Bell, of the Auto Club of Missouri, was presented as a new member; also Ron Jones.

James Alexander had as a guest his son, Charles Alexander, Jr.

Inflation Reaches Illegal Drug Sales

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Inflation has hit marijuana, doubling its price in a year. The reason: It's getting scarce.

An uncommonly dry period in northern Mexico's growing area may be the cause. U.S. Customs Agent Walter Buck said Thursday.

And it's "between crops," said Joseph House, who heads the State Narcotics Office in San Diego.

Marijuana has been illegal in the United States since 1937.

Agents operating through the San Ysidro Border Station seized 40,000 pounds of marijuana in the 1967-68 fiscal year. In the year that ended Thursday, they counted 20,000 pounds.

A year ago, marijuana sold on the illicit market for about $75 a kilo, or 2.2 pounds. Now it's $150 or more.

O'Casey Literary Papers to Library

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Public Library has acquired a large collection of the literary papers of the late Irish playwright Sean O'Casey.

The material includes 25 manuscript notebooks in the playwright's handwriting, 27 packages of typescripts and a large number of galley proofs.

Among the items is a three-act play, "The Harvest Festival," which O'Casey submitted to the Abbey Theater in 1919. It was rejected and was never produced or published.

The library said it paid "in excess of $100,000" to the playwright's widow for the material. It will be housed in the Berg Collection of English and American literature.

Ann Landers

Heavenly Bodies Are Earthbound

Dear Ann Landers: Several weeks ago my husband bought a telescope to study the stars — he said. After the fourth night he lost interest in the sky and is now studying other "heavenly bodies." We live in an apartment which is ideally situated for his new hobby. He hurries through dinner, races to the window and stays there four or five hours at a time.

Last week he invited three of the boys from the office to enjoy the fun. He was quite disappointed because his two best subjects for observation (he calls them Venus and Mars) were not at home. He promised the boys he'd invite them back.

I am disgusted with him and he knows it. I am also concerned that he might be breaking the law. I've heard of men being arrested as Peeping Toms. Please inform me. — Just Looking, Thanks

Dear Just: So long as Tom stays in his own apartment he cannot be arrested. In the meantime, be patient, dearie. Tom will tire of his hobby after a while. Growing up takes time.

Dear Ann: A distant relative of mine who is going through the menopause is acting very oddly. Six weeks ago she telephoned at 2:00 A.M. and asked, "Are you all right?" I said, "Yes, of course." She then related a terrible dream she had in which I was murdered. That was the end of my night's sleep.

A week later she telephoned at 6:00 A.M. and asked if I had called her. I said, "No." She then explained that her phone had rung and she heard a scream that sounded like my voice.

This past week she has telephoned five times, accused me of calling her and not speaking, just breathing into the phone. I'm sure the woman needs a psychiatrist. In the meantime I'm going to need one, too, if she doesn't quit bothering me. Any suggestions? — Pestered By A Nut

Dear Pes: Suggest that she see a doctor and get help. Then help yourself by getting an unlisted telephone number. It costs nothing

Dear Ann: Our 11-year-old son's best friend, Joey, wants to admire his father and tries hard to justify his drinking. Last night he asked if I was against beer, "even if a person can drink 12 bottles in a row and still walk a straight line." He added with fake bravado, "My dad can do it!"

I gave a non-committal answer and then hated myself for not having the courage to tell the boy what heavy, continuous drinking can do to a person. How can I get the message across without running down his father, and incidentally, his mother, too? — Austin

Dear Austin: It is not your responsibility to "get the message across." A child's basic concepts are learned at home, not from the neighbors. When the boy asks leading questions tell him to talk to his parents. In the meantime, some individuals who grew up around alcoholism hate liquor and never touch it. Others turn out to be second and third generation lusers, which gives the impression that alcoholism is hereditary. It is not, of course. It is a learned response to frustration, loneliness and insecurity.

Kicksville Attraction

The last "kick-off" dance before the State Fair, featuring the Lavender Hill Mob, will be held Saturday in the Kicksville Arena on the Fairgrounds. The group, well-known to mid-Missouri teens, now has added two new members. The dance, from 9-12 p.m., is to raise money to aid Kicksville, a non-profit youth organization, in its activities at the State Fair.

Columbia, Crew Reunited

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The spacecraft Columbia and the three astronauts who flew it to the moon and back have been reunited in the lunar quarantine station.

Technicians moved the Apollo 11 command module into its bay in the lunar receiving laboratory Thursday night. Officials said the astronauts would be able to visit it and retrieve personal gear left on board when it splashed down in the Pacific.

The crew—Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr.—spent Thursday giving a seminar on their mission to the Apollo 12 astronauts, who plan to go to the moon in November.

Charles Conrad, the Apollo 12 commander, asked Armstrong if he thought a program of two moon walks, both with a longer duration than Armstrong's stroll of 2 hours 32 minutes, was feasible.

"Neil told him it was," said John McLeish, a public relations officer in quarantine with the Apollo 11 crew.

The spacemen gave the mission report to their colleagues from behind a glass wall of the lunar receiving laboratory. Conrad, his crewmates Richard Gordon and Alan Bean, and several other astronauts listened from the outside.

Meanwhile scientists in another part of the laboratory injected specks of moon material into the bodies of 24 germ-free mice in an experiment intended to smoke out possible moon microbes.

If there are living micro-organisms in the moon matter, scientists expect them to develop rapidly in the mice, since the little animals have no immunity to such bodily invaders.

The space agency released Thursday night a series of pictures taken on the surface of the moon by Armstrong and Aldrin.

One view showed Armstrong and Aldrin posing beside the American flag. Both men were unrecognizable in the bulky white space suits that kept them alive.

In another view, Aldrin stood alone in a crater, his brilliant white suit showing splotches of moon dust, suggesting that he might have fallen to his knees. In his gold visor, the moon lander, Armstrong and the flag were clearly reflected.

The space agency also released motion picture film showing Collins shaving in space, Armstrong and Aldrin with the flag, and the moon's surface receding as the lunar module took off.

Wall Street is Showing Signs of Losing Touch

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It really wasn't surprising that a rumor swept Wall Street this week to the effect that the prime interest rate would be lowered. It would have been more surprising if something of the sort hadn't happened.

Wall Street has become bored and frightened by bad news, and in any financial district when the reality of bad news becomes intolerable, and when that bad news continues as it has, then you must invent its opposite.

The fact that a good rumor was so long in coming was the real surprise, and its long delay casts serious doubts upon the well known creative talents of the Street. Compared with the 1920s, Wall Street has lost its touch.

The latest word was that the Morgan Guaranty Trust Company would initiate a reduction in the basic lending rate to business. This would be followed, the rumor implied, by a sweeping reduction in rates across the country.

This was good news indeed because, if true, it would indicate that the bone-breaking credit screws were being loosened a bit and that business could look ahead to big things, profits especially.

As a result, activity spurted and prices rose and an electric feeling seemed to charge the atmosphere.

It made little or no difference that Morgan Guaranty claimed not to have any such intentions, for the truth is not always needed to support a good rumor, if people wish to believe the rumor.

In recent years, for example, Wall Streeters somehow have learned of alleged favorable turns of events in Vietnam before the Pentagon, and of diplomatic matters before the State Department.

By the time such rumors are compared with the facts and found to be anything but mirror images, they have had their effects, usually in the form of sudden spurts in activity or in reversals of trading trends.

Subsequent denials seldom put the market back where it was before the false information made the rounds. It simply is impossible to wipe away its effects; there is no return to the starting point. The effect is of ten permanent.

Why shouldn't it be? As any rumor peddler knows, a good rumor is just as good as the facts for moving the market. To an extent, a rumor is reality in the marketplace. It is part of the grist that is ground into the meal that is served the public.

Nobody needs to eat that mush, however, and therein lies the demise of many rumors: Unless there is a receptive environment for the rumor it dies as swiftly as an organism in an airless environment.

But if the environment is receptive, and Wall Street is receptive to any good news these days, the rumor sweeps the canyons of the financial district like an ocean breeze on a sultry day.

Additional Aid Sought by Hearnese

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes has asked for emergency federal flood and drought aid for 19 more Missouri counties.

A week ago he asked that haying or grazing be permitted on diverted acreage in 27 flood counties and 16 drought counties.

Wednesday he added five counties to the drought list — Carter, Ripley, Dunklin, Taney and Wright.

The 14 new flood counties are Bates, Boone, Chariton, Jefferson, Johnson, Knox, Lewis, Miller, Moniteau, Monroe, Ralls, Ray, Shelby and Worth.

Tribute to Space Scientist Planned

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. (AP) — The Huntsville Press Club plans to erect a permanent tribute to Dr. Wernher von Braun, the developer of the Saturn 5 rocket that launched the Apollo 11 astronauts to the moon.

Patrick McCauley said Wednesday the form of the tribute has not been decided, but something appropriate will be dedicated to the German-born scientist whose vision of manned space landing culminated July 20 with the lunar landing.

Romania Familiar To Nixon

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Bucharest, Romania's dusty capital, will not be new to President Nixon. He visited there in 1967 as a private citizen and had a long and cordial talk with the man who runs the country.

At 51, Nicolai Ceausescu is both head of state—equivalent to president—and chief of the Communist party. 1.8 million members which rules the country of about 20 million. He remains an orthodox Communist in domestic affairs, but in the foreign and trade fields he is a maverick, insisting on independence from Moscow.

Under Ceausescu's leadership, the government has been stable, and he is pushing young technocrats into positions of authority.

Ceausescu is ambitious for Romania's industrial future. Even now it is largely an agricultural country, but last year the nation had a spectacular 10 per cent gain in its growth rate. The chemical industry is booming and gets a fifth of all government industrial investment funds. There is heavy stress on petrochemicals.

The Romanians can assert a certain amount of independence because they are less dependent than others in East Europe upon the Soviet Union. Romania has the largest oil and gas reserves in Europe. In addition, it has agreements with many non-Communist nations, and particularly with Arab nations and Venezuela, also big oil producers.

Romania derives its name from the people's claim to descent from the early Romans.

In 1948, during the Soviet occupation of the country, it was taken over by the Communists and became a "people's democracy." It went through all the tortures of other people's democracies, including the violent blood purges of the Stalin era. The counterpurgers of Stalinists after the Soviet dictator's death finally ended in 1957, and the nation has been stable since then.

As President Nixon flies in he will see the fertile plains of the Danube basin below rugged Carpathian peaks. In Bucharest he will be able to note the signs of what led to the decay of the monarchy, the huge, crumbling old mansions of yellow stucco which once were the homes of Romania's small wealthy class.

Handgun Confiscation

President Nixon at this point might welcome an excuse to delay his homecoming from a world tour.

Waiting for him is the recommendation of Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower's National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence that citizens be relieved of some 21 million handguns now in private hands. This is a new volley on the gun control front that could signal another of those conflict of policy crises — with the President in the damned-if-he-does, damned-if-he-doesn't middle — which seem to be becoming a hallmark of the Nixon administration.

In this case, the conflict is between the commission's proposal for stringent new federal-state curbs on firearms possession and the testimony of administration spokesmen on Capitol Hill only a few days earlier opposing additional gun control legislation at the present time.

The testimony before the Senate Judiciary Committee, delivered by a deputy attorney general among others, supposedly represented the official administration position. The violence commission is an ad hoc body, originally set up by President Johnson. Nixon, however, last May extended its mandate to the end of this year, a seal of administration acceptance if not necessarily full status.

Apart from whatever pushing and hauling may result in the administration, the commission report is certain to have widespread impact. Offhand, it might appear to be an attempt at an end run around the major organized opposition to gun control by the National Rifle Association, because the report concentrates on handguns, of minor importance on the sporting scene.

But even in the unlikely event the NRA did not choose to man the barricades once more, the commission runs head on into a new and numerous interest group — millions of householders and shopkeepers. Annual sales of handguns are four times now what they were five years ago, a period neatly matching the rising national concern over law and order. The commission has statistics to show that guns more often lead to tragic home accidents than to thwarted robberies. But it is difficult to tell an individual, convinced he needs a gun for his own protection, that statistics apply to him as well as somebody, or everybody else.

And if it has been difficult to sell Congress and state legislatures on measures as mild as registration and import curbs, there seems no chance that they will buy, at least at present, anything so drastic as confiscation.

The immediate effect of the commission report, therefore, is likely to be limited to revival of the gun control debate, both within the administration and in the public forum. The Judiciary Committee testimony would have attracted little notice if it had not been for the timing, which seems too much of a coincidence, of the commission report.

If nothing else, it demonstrates that speaking softly will not make an unresolved major issue go away. And gun control is that kind of an issue.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Long Cherishes Tax Prerogatives

By DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Senate Finance Chairman Russell Long erupted like a gusher in his native Louisiana tidelands when he first learned about Sen. Ted Kennedy's plan to introduce a comprehensive tax reform program.

Ever since Kennedy dethroned him as Senate Democratic whip, Long has bristled at even the mention of Kennedy's name. So when Long found that Kennedy was meddling with taxes he really blew his top. Taxes are the sole prerogative of the Senate Finance Committee.

Snorting fire, Long accosted Kennedy in the Senate Democratic cloakroom the other day. Breaking into a conversation between Kennedy and Iowa's Sen. Harold Hughes, Long informed Kennedy testily that his tax proposals would never get the approval of the Finance Committee.

In that event, replied Kennedy, he would bring them up on the Senate floor as amendments to the tax bill.

Long asked derisively how many times Kennedy had been able to override the appointed committees on the Senate floor.

"How many have you won?" demanded Long.

His language was too explosive to be printed here. The sparks quickly spread through the Senate's backrooms, and a friend asked Long what he had said.

"I told Kennedy to go fly a kite," said the senator from Louisiana. Then he flashed the impish grin that has become a Long trademark and added: "but I used language that would be understood on the Louisiana wharves."

Meanwhile, the Senator from Louisiana is trying to slow the pellmell rush for tax reforms. The House Ways and Means Committee acted so swiftly that the lobbyists for the special interests were caught by surprise.

In the past, they had been able to count on powerful House friends to sidetrack reforms. Not until it was too late did they realize that a tax reform bill was heading down the main track, straight to the House floor.

They will be unable to sabotage the bill on the floor. Under the closed rule on tax measures, the House must accept or reject the entire reform bill. The outcry from middle-income Americans for tax reforms will make it dangerous for any congressman to vote against the bill.

As a result, the lobbyists are suddenly swarming like summer tourists on the Senate side of Capitol Hill. Their only chance to head off reforms at this date is in the Senate, where the bill can be adorned with obscure clauses that will save their tax benefits.

It is largely up to Long to protect the tax loopholes. The oil and gas industry in particular is counting upon him. Long is a big stockholder in the "Win or Lose Oil Company" whose shares sell for $25,000. The oil boys were jolted by the 7½ per cent reduction voted by the House Ways and Means Committee, which previously had operated as a branch office of the oil industry. Long gave the Senate Democratic Policy Committee a preview of his strategy during a recent closed-door hassle over taxes. He argued at length that one Congress's loopholes were another Congress's reforms.

"While a great deal of attention is presently focused on the closing of loopholes," he said, "I can point to countless provisions of the tax law which prior Congresses put there to close the loopholes of their time."

He made it clear that he intends to examine every reform carefully before he starts plugging loopholes. However, he is a populist in the image of his father, the late Huey "Kingfish" Long. Except for the oil industry, Russell Long can't be depended upon to safeguard the tax privileges of all the special interests.

He confided to the Democratic policymakers behind closed doors: "Certainly the rules governing the tax-exempt foundations are going to be tightened, and I am optimistic that a minimum income tax will be enacted to do something about the fellow who is financially able to juggle his income and deductions in a way as to avoid paying any federal income tax — or perhaps only a token tax."

"That sort of exploitation of the tax law is a direct consequence of wealth. It creates an unfair preference in favor of the man who is fortunate enough to make his money from the ownership of property as contrasted to people who earn their living with their hands."

—Simpler Tax Return—

Long also wants to simplify the income tax returns.

"I'd like to offer every taxpayer," he told the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, "a simplified method of reporting his income and paying his tax."

Nor has Long given up his idea of letting the taxpayers, instead of the special interests, pay for presidential campaigns through a tax check-off system.

"Although the tax check-off was suspended a few months after it was enacted," he said, "it has focused the attention of the nation on a problem we are going to have to deal with, probably before the next presidential election in 1972."

Clearly, the struggle in the Senate between the lobbyists and the reformers is going to be a classic. It will be interesting to see whether the special interests, with all their backroom lobbying and backdoor contributions, will be able to preserve their tax privileges.

Note — The tax lobby is banking upon Senate Republican leader Everett Dirksen to save its tax exemptions in the final Senate showdown. Dirksen has built his Senate career upon championing the special interests, some of which are represented by his law firm back in Peoria.

Acting---but Bare(ly)

This may be "the dawning of the Age of Aquarius," as a certain hippie musical proclaims, but it's beginning to look more like a return to the Age of Dionysius.

Consider the new rules that Actors Equity Association has found it necessary to publish to govern the hiring of actors, singers and dancers appearing in Broadway or off-Broadway productions.

In a statement of policy, the union has declared that:

Its members must be given prior notice if their roles call for nudity and/or simulated sex acts onstage.

Producers must indemnify a performer in case of arrest and furnish bail, fines and legal counsel.

No performer may be required to disrobe until he has been auditioned, and nudity will be permissible at auditions only when an Equity official is present.

All those wishing to apply for jobs as Equity officials — don't call them, they'll call you.

Apollo 11 Medal

Presidential Art Medals is commemorating man's first lunar landing with a new high relief art medal. This memento has not yet been advertised and we are the first to announce it.

Mr. Harper, vice president of Presidential Art Medals, told me by phone that, although the medal has never been discussed openly, orders have been coming in from all over the world in anticipation of its possible striking.

Ralph Menconi, the "Sculptor of Presidents," designed and executed the models for this medal, the second he has produced honoring an event in the space program. In 1964, Menconi sculptured the model for Project Mercury, now part of the Project Mercury Monument at Cape Kennedy.

The obverse of this medal shows the portraits of Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins centered by an NASA patch. The reverse depicts Armstrong and Aldrin probing the surface of the moon with the national colors implanted in the surface near the module and the earth in the background as it appears at high noon with only the top half showing illumination.

Although this photo was made from the original 30-inch model, the 2½-inch finished piece reflects each tiny detail. Under a magnifier, features of the module are recognizable.

Harper said delivery would start by mid-September and orders will be processed as received until all of the serially numbered pure silver medals are sold.

Silver pieces are priced at $35 each and antiqued bronze pieces at $5 each. Interested readers may address inquiries to Presidential Art Medals, Inc., Englewood, Ohio 45322.

Eisenhower Silver Dollar

Massachusetts' Rep. Silvio O. Conte is becoming exercised again, this time in a bout with Congress over the proposed Eisenhower silver dollar.

According to the congressman there isn't enough silver left in the Treasury pot to pay the help and demands that the silver dollar proposal introduced by Colorado Sen. Peter Dominick be swept to one side.

I would like to remind Conte that the Coinage Act of 1965 and the Commission on the Coinage (of which he has been a member for years) provided for the minting of a silver dollar after June, 1970. There is sufficient silver for this particular issue, according to the General Services Administration, and I suggest that readers interested in seeing an Eisenhower dollar struck in 90 per cent silver write their congressmen to that effect.

Crisis in Food

Hope Lies in Science

By BRUCE BLOSSAT,
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) — The world's most advanced industrial nations tend also to be the best agricultural producers. The link is close, for farming today is a complex "science" industry.

With rare exceptions, the poor countries, where farming is "their thing," are the worst at it.

Yet the trail being blazed by the big gainers — the United States, some European lands, Japan and such surprising followers as Nationalist China (Taiwan) and Mexico — is having its important effect worldwide.

World food output is up 50 per cent since World War II, and crop acreage is 18 per cent higher than before that war. Meantime, global population has risen 35 per cent.

There has been an explosion of knowledge about soils, plant physiology, fertilizers, water use and control, pest and disease control, cropping techniques, machinery, reforestation, storage.

The difficulty is that some farmers in the advanced nations and nearly all in the underdeveloped lands are either unaware of most of this knowledge or, for varying reasons, cannot apply it.

As in industry, Japan in farming has become almost a model. Starting with a handicapping cool climate, low original soil fertility and methods as primitive as any in Asia, it has emerged as the globe's greatest practitioner of scientific farming.

Its crop yields per acre are 6 to 1 over huge India, struggling to feed 515 million people. Japan uses more commercial fertilizer than all the rest of Asia combined. At least 60 per cent of its arable land is heavily irrigated. It uses machinery fitted to small farms, the strongest, highest-yielding crop varieties, the best cropping techniques.

If all Asia practiced farming as do the Japanese, food output there would soon be hundreds of millions of tons greater each year. Indeed, it is the start given improved farming by the conquering Japanese at the turn of the century that helps put Taiwan and South Korea far above most other Asian lands in productivity today.

The promise for the poor producers of Asia, Africa and Latin America can be seen in many places:

— California, using water and new plant breeds well, gets a rice yield 10 times that of ancient mainland China, where it is the staple of life.

— The United States, turning heavily to hybrid corn and appropriate fertilizer, is dramatically outstripping the world in yields.

— Mexico, venturing with new breeds, fertilizer and water use, has doubled its wheat yields since the war. Some 15 per cent of India's wheatlands today are planted to Mexican varieties.

— Pesticides have doubled U.S. potato production, and it is estimated that, if insect pests were well-controlled, a 30 to 50 per cent increase in yields would occur in world food staples.

— India and other Asian lands with wet-and-dry climates could irrigate huge acreages in their long rainless spells by storing the usable flow of swollen rivers in rainy months. Today India catches just one-third of that useful flow, and others do far worse.

Land reform, the darling of the liberals and radicals, is a real need in Latin America and some other places.

But it is just one element in a necessarily sophisticated blend. The other, often-more-vital needs are the fullest useful application of farming sciences, industrial growth attuned to farming where farm manpower will always be heavy in number, new means of credit and co-operative management, new habits of working and living.

THE DOCTOR SAYS

Campers: Use Repellents To Avoid Chigger Bites

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

What started out to be a delightful camping trip is often spoiled by red mite or chiggers. These insect larvae are found in grassy fields, berry patches, city parks and damp woods. They will take up temporary residence with great impartiality on birds, animals, reptiles or man. Seeking locations where the skin is most tender, they often wind up where the clothing is tight — under garters, belts, shoe tops, girdles or bras.

Once there, they bite and cause red welts that burn and itch and sometimes keep one awake most of the night. Scratching is hard to avoid but may lead to infected sores that will require antiseptics and sterile dressings. All authorities agree that the first line of business after exposure to chiggers is to take a bath with soap and hot water and follow this with an ointment that contains 10 per cent sulfur and 1 per cent phenol in a greaseless base.

Much of this can be avoided through the judicious use of repellents, such as diethyltoluamide, Indalone, dimethyl carbate and benzyl benzoate. When you buy a repellent, you should check the label to make sure it contains one or more of these ingredients. It is not necessary to saturate your garments with the repellent. Pour a little on your hands, rub them together, then rub them lightly on the places where the bites are most likely to occur — especially around all openings, such as shirt cuffs, trouser cuffs, the hem of a dress, the tops of socks and the inner side of the neckband.

If a spray is used, apply it to these same areas. To be a successful camper, you've got to be smarter than the chiggers.

Q — What is the cause of Iceland disease? What are the symptoms, duration and treatment?

A — This disease, also known as benign myalgic encephalomyelitis and epidemic neuromyasthenia, is believed to be caused by an as yet unidentified virus. It is characterized by fatigue, weakness, a low fever, nausea, headache, generalized aching pains, emotional instability, depression and mental confusion. This disease may persist with fluctuating severity for seven months or even longer, but it is never fatal. Since there is no specific treatment, efforts are aimed at relieving the symptoms.

Here's a Variety of Uses For Empty Egg Cartons

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—I want to tell Mrs. D. D. S. Jr., that I am just back from visiting my daughter in Oregon. She has an herb "garden" in her kitchen window. It is made with those new plastic egg cartons. They also would be nice for starting flower plants for the garden or to take plants to shut-ins.—MABEL

DEAR POLLY and Mrs. D. D. S. Jr.—Our high school class used plastic egg cartons to fashion a "brick" wall as part of our prom decorations. We stapled several together and then put them on wooden forms, using the lids as well as the bottoms. Two rough sections were put together and then two smooth sections to create alternating squares. They can be spray-painted any color. We draped paper flowers on our "brick" walls.—ANN

DEAR READERS—The following suggestions for the use of plastic egg cartons were sent to us by the president of the company which makes them. Our sincere thanks for his interest.

Mr. R. L. G. suggests their use for storing bulbs, for starting seedlings and for planting seeds after one cuts holes in each of the cells and then walks along shaking the carton. They could make wall decorations with the bottom halves stapled to an unfinished wall in patterns or completely cover it. Also the handyman could use these cartons for storage of nails, nuts and bolts. The lady of the house can use them for jewelry boxes. Children use them in a sand box or hill of snow. These trays can serve for freezing ice-pops. The home sewer can file her sewing aids in them. They are useful for mixing paint to obtain various colors, and also used to store and deliver decorated Easter eggs.—POLLY

Polly's Problem

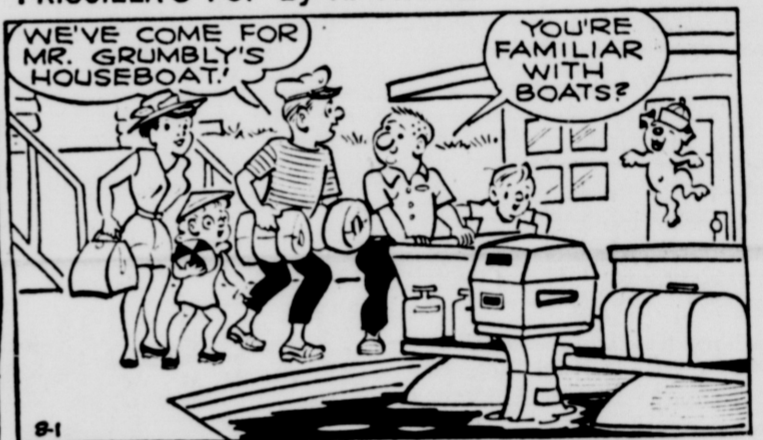

DEAR POLLY—How can I remove rust from metal Venetian blinds? Can the slats be painted?—B. W.

DEAR POLLY—Pam wanted to know what to do to the leather straps on her beige linen skirt that had faded during dry cleaning. I believe the best way to restore them is with shoe dye. I have found this popular shoe dye, when used as directed on leather (not plastic), works wonderfully well to restore scuffed items or to change the color. I do hope this works well for Pam.—MARY ELLEN

'Big S.I.R.' to Host World Points Finale

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

The word is official: "Sedalia International Raceway (The Big S.I.R.) will host the 1969 World Points Finale, Oct. 3, 4 and 5."

The World Points Finale, often called the second largest drag event of the year, was held in Kansas City last year at Kansas City International Raceway and word came through the office of Jim Tice, president of the American Hot Rod Association earlier this week that the event will again be held in the "Show Me State" this year.

The AHRA has broken the Grand American Drag Racing Points Circuit into two sections: Group one consists of competition, street, top stock and Mr. Stock divisions. Group two is made up of fuel funny, top fuel, top gas, junior fuel and super stock classes.

Cars in group one will be awarded points on the following basis: 100 points for entering, 100 points for winning their class, 300 points for winning eliminator bracket, 100 points for runner-up in eliminator bracket, 50 points for e.t. (elapsed time) record, and 50 points for miles per hour record.

Cars in group one either have or will have earned points at any of the four divisional points races, three points races held outside their own division, special points races and all championship races.

Group two cars can earn points only at championships and special points races. The points are awarded as follows:

Fan's Delight

Drag racing fans at Sedalia International will be able to see fuel dragsters such as the one above driven by Jimmy Nixon, turn a quarter mile distance in less than seven seconds at the 'Big S.I.R.'

100 points for qualifying, 100 points for each round win, 100 points for eliminator runner-up, 300 points for eliminator win and 50 points for a new AHRA record.

The World Points Finale also has an open competition division for group one and group two (non-professional and professional) drivers that have not picked up any divisional points during the 1969 season.

The World Points Finale is not only open to those drivers that earned points during the year, but also open to drivers, both professional and non-professional, that have not been awarded points. Drivers in this classification will race in the open division.

Kansas City International Raceway was scheduled to host this year's World Points Finale, but apathy and lack of enthusiasm on the part of the owners of KCIR and the spectators in the Kansas City area prompted Tice and the American Hot Rod Association to move the meet.

The World Points Finale is a $100,000 plus drag event. The AHRA will put up $30,000, Sedalia International will put up $30,000, and the remainder is given through automobile and accessory manufacturers.

George O. Weatherly, president of the "Big S.I.R.," stated that Sedalia International is fortunate to host the points meet, since many times it is a number of years before a new drag strip can hold an international meet of this size.

AHRA president Jim Tice said that last year more than 400 drivers took part in the World Points Finale. Tice went on to say, "This year we expect 600-800 drivers to show up in Sedalia for the three-day meet."

Of the 23 divisional points races scheduled for this season,

Dick Harrell... Super Camaro

Kansas Citian Dick Harrell earlier this year drove his Super Camaro to a new fuel funny car AHRA record. His record has since fallen to Gene Snow's

"Rambunctious" Dodge Charger. Snow's unofficial mark is 206.88 mph in an e.t. of 7.71 seconds.

all but seven have been staged. Those remaining races include: Division 1 — Puyallup Drag Strip, Bellevue, Wash., Aug. 17.

Division 3 — Raceway Park, Wichita, Kan., Aug. 2; Manhattan Raceway Park, Manhattan, Kan., Aug. 3.

Division 4 — US 30 Drag Strip, Gary, Ind., Aug. 10.

Division 5 — Dragway 42, West Salem, Ohio, Aug. 10.

Division 6 — Bristol International Dragway, Bristol, Tenn., Sept. 6-7; Rockingham International Dragway, Rockingham, N.C., Sept. 26-28.

The following is a breakdown of the six different AHRA divisions.

Division 1 — Washington, Oregon, Montana, Wyoming, California, Nevada, Utah, Idaho, Arizona.

Division 2 — New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Mississippi, Louisiana.

Division 3 — North Dakota, South Dakota, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri.

Division 4 — Wisconsin, Illinois, Indiana.

Division 5 — Ohio, Michigan, West Virginia, Kentucky.

Division 6 — Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Florida, Tennessee, Delaware.

Tentative opening date for Sedalia International is the weekend of Aug. 15-17.

Construction on the "Big S.I.R." is progressing well.

The three-story tower is all but finished; the leveling of the dirt base the asphalt top will be laid on is nearing completion and the old "hog barns" on the South Highway 65 location are almost all torn down.

Entry deadline for the Miss Sedalia Raceway contest which is being held in conjunction with the drag strip opening is Aug. 3. The Pettis County girl who is chosen "Miss Sedalia Raceway" will reign for the remainder of the 1969 racing season and the entire 1970 schedule.

She will receive, in addition to the other prizes, a wardrobe valued at $200; the two runners-up receive a $100 wardrobe. Interested Pettis County girls should contact Mrs. Carl Zimmerschied, 2409 Golf Ave., Sedalia or call 826-3641.

Lions Lose 7-4 Verdict To Tipton

The Sedalia Lions, who picked up four quick victories early in the season, have found wins hard to come by as of late.

The Tipton BJ's handed the

Khoury Results

Bings won an impressive 2-0 victory over Kiwanis in the Pettie division of girls Khoury League softball Thursday night. Barbara Berry was the winning pitcher; Sandy Kozisek took the loss.

In the Chic division, Blue Young downed Winks by the count of 8-2. Carol Schuster was credited with the win for Blue Young; Vicki Fry was tagged with the loss.

Tallman's posted a 12-2 win over Howard's in another Chic contest. Winning hurler was Becky Lower; Katy Hogan was the loser.

In the Sophomore division, the Lions squeaked by Sedalia Police by the score of 13-12. Becky Nicholson was the winning pitcher; the loser was Nancy Busick.

Lions their tenth defeat of the year Thursday night before the home town fans at Liberty Park.

Tipton struck early in the contest by scoring one run in each of the first three frames.

The locals chased across four runs in the bottom of the third

Sweet Springs Wins Tournament

WAVERLY — The Waverly Softball Tournament ended Wednesday night with the first place trophy going to Sweet Springs by virtue of their win over Knob Noster in the finals, 5-3.

Winning pitcher for Sweet Springs in the championship tilt was Richard Vott; Randall Bredehoeft did the catching.

Marshall took third place in the tourney; Waverly, the host team, was fourth.

Other teams entered in the tournament included: Malta Bend, Slater, Concordia, LaMonte and Houstonia.

to take a 4-3 lead; those were the last Sedalia runs of the night.

Tipton picked up two more runs in the top of the sixth and one each in the eighth and the ninth compiling their 7-4 winning margin.

Tipton could have netted more tallies since they left 12 runners on base in the contest, but the Sedalia defense rose to the occasion.

The final line score read Tipton: seven runs, 11 hits on one error; Sedalia: four runs, seven hits on three errors.

Jack Markway was the winning pitcher; Dave Nash was tagged with the loss.

Sedalia has two more games on their 1969 schedule (others may be added due to rain outs).

Saturday night Columbia, who is currently in second place in the Central Missouri Ban Johnson League, will tangle with the Lions at Liberty Park at 8 p.m.

Next Thursday night at 8 p.m. Sedalia will host Boonville.

District Tourney Opens at Marshall

The District Men's Softball Tournament opens tonight at Marshall. Two teams are entered from Sedalia: Dr. Pepper and O'Connor Chevy-Buick.

Only one of the local teams sees action tonight; Hall Motors squares off against Dr. Pepper in the opening game of the tournament at 7:30 p.m. O'Connor will play Saturday night at 9:30 p.m.; they will be opposed by LaMonte.

A total of 20 teams are entered in this year's tourney.

VFW and Rotary Win Contests

VFW and Rotary posted wins in the Sedalia 13-15 Babe Ruth League Thursday night.

VFW, behind the winning pitching of Ronnie Geotz, took a 4-1 victory over Adco. Ronnie Ehlers was the losing hurler.

Randy Kidwell pitched a 13-9 win over S and M. Dale Schroder took the loss for S and M.

Contest Tonight

The Lafayette-Saline County women's softball team will play the Harold Ensley softball team from Kansas City at 8 p.m. Friday night at Sweet Springs.

'B' League Champs

Last week the Missouri State Bank "B" Little League team ended its season with a 13-1-0 record and the National League Championship. They also ended the city tournament play on top with three wins and no defeats. Team members are: (kneeling left to right) Everett Hawkins, Clifford Ives, Mike Albin, Kent Mahoney, Steve Martin,

Democratic Stampede Viewed As Possibility for 1972 Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's rejection of 1972 presidential aspirations could produce a Democratic political scramble—if it sticks.

But two potential participants in such a scramble aren't certain the Kennedy disclaimer is irrevocable.

And another Democratic senator suggests pressure from within the party could change Kennedy's mind.

Kennedy, returning to the Capitol for the first time since a tardily-reported, fatal automobile accident July 18, said repeatedly Thursday he would not run for the White House in 1972 under any circumstances.

In announcing his return, and his intention to run for re-election next year, the Massachusetts senator said if he wins another term, he will serve all six years. That would take him through 1976, past the next presidential race.

He wouldn't speculate about his long range political future.

Theodore Sorensen, a long-time intimate and political adviser to the Kennedy family said Thursday night the senator realized the accident "damaged if not destroyed" his prospects for the 1972 presidential nomination.

"He recognizes that the fall-out from the tragic automobile accident in which he was involved has been such that his continued availability for the presidency would only add to more hate mail, more conflicting pressures, more speculation as to his motives," Sorensen said, adding:

"He simply would be more comfortable out. And, he also recognizes that his prospects were damaged if not destroyed. Sorensen was interviewed on the CBS Evening News With Walter Cronkite.

Sen. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine, the 1968 Democratic vice presidential candidate, said he couldn't even speculate about the short range results of Kennedy's announcement.

"There's nothing irrevocable about anything that's happening in politics these days," said Muskie, who is rated in the front rank of potential contenders for the next presidential nomination—particularly if Kennedy stands aside.

Sen. George S. McGovern, R-S.D., who ran a brief presidential bid a year ago, said Kennedy rates as a national Democratic leader whether or not he runs in 1972.

"I don't think there is any prime candidate for 1972," said McGovern. He listed Muskie, former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. Fred R. Harris of Oklahoma as serious possibilities.

McGovern said he was reserving any judgment about making another presidential bid himself.

WASHINGTON (AP) — As far as Nixon administration farm officials are concerned the bad guys in the barnyard these days are the wheat wheel-dealers in the European Common Market who peddle surplus grain at cut-rate prices at the expense of the American farmer and taxpayer.

But the Common Market—with France as the main producer—is not alone in the fray. Skirmishes have been fought for months involving the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina, and an all-out price war could break out momentarily.

All in all, the world has far more wheat than it can use or sell, and this has meant cut-throat competition for the meager markets which do exist.

Agriculture Department sources say, however, the Common Market is the biggest culprit, that it has flagrantly abused the controversial International Grains Arrangement—which theoretically sets minimum prices for world wheat trade—and has nosed into traditional U. S. markets by offering cut-rate wheat.

However, the IGA was designed before the world market was glutted by huge crops in the major exporting nations. In addition, some of the historically big markets—India and Pakistan, for example—have started to produce more wheat of their own.

The U. S. wheat situation is particularly strained, officials say. Exports for the fiscal year that ended June 30 were only 542 million bushels—a third of 1968 farm production—compared with 761 million bushels the year before, or about half the output.

Another big crop—estimated at more than 1.4 billion bushels—is being harvested now.

On the average, the United States consumes less than half the wheat it produces annually. The rest must be exported or it winds up owned by the government and stored—sometimes for years—at taxpayer expense.

A decade ago, following bumper crops and so-so exports, U. S. surpluses rose to more than one billion bushels and cost taxpayers $500,000 a day simply to store the excess.

Thus, as American farmers continue to harvest near-record crops and exports dwindle, the stockpile grows. The wheat carryover June 30 was 811 million bushels, compared with 539 million a year earlier and the low mark of 425 million at mid-1967. The government has cut farm acreage allotments sharply the past two years in an effort to curb production. The Nixon administration now is considering a further reduction for the 1970 crop.

But other big wheat countries

Foreign Wheat Dealers Cause Problems

have failed to reduce production, USDA officials say. And yet, they point out, France guarantees her wheat farmers a price support of about $2.50 a bushel or about double what U. S. producers receive.

On July 18 the United States dropped the first big bomb, announcing that the export price of hard red winter wheat—the kind in largest supply—would be cut 12 cents a bushel at Gulf and East Coast ports.

The price reduction did not affect wheat moving to the Far East and Latin America. The cut was aimed primarily at regaining some of the export trade with the Common Market itself, particularly for the hard winter wheat grown in Kansas and the remainder of the southern plains.

The Common Market has bought substantial amounts of hard spring wheat and durum for blending with the poorer quality European varieties, but purchases of hard winter types dropped from 30 million bushels in 1967-68 to around 14 million in the year just ended.

Instead of immediately forcing Europeans into a higher price line, Common Market agricultural ministers have indicated they may increase subsidy payments and lower wheat export prices themselves.

Some Europeans feel they were double-crossed by the U. S. price cut. The Common Market had made overtures a day or two before the July 18 announcement.

to the effect that it would pull out of the Far East market, leaving the U. S. a cleaner field, and increase its own export wheat price.

In exchange, the Common Market wanted assurances that the U. S. would not cut its export price.

"That message was carefully studied by this government," the official said, "and by more than just the USDA—they had everybody and the kitchen sink in it."

But administration officials concluded the Common Market offer was "too vague and not completely responsive."

All the economic sword rattling and dissension over IGA minimum price cutting are but symptoms of the major factor: There is far too much wheat in the world for anybody to expect much gain in exports.

In 1965-66 the world wheat trade was 62.5 million tons, or about 2.3 billion bushels. A year later it was 52 million tons, and for the year ended June 30 world exports dropped to 47 million tons.

Stockpiles are growing in all the major producing nations. Officials here say the Common Market surplus may be six million tons, not counting its new crop.

And unless these surpluses somehow are assimilated or production curbed drastically in other countries as well as the United States, the U. S. stockpile a year from now could reach as much as one billion bushels, signaling once again the possibility of $500,000 a day in storage costs for the American taxpayer.

Destroy Potato Crops

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Farmers in some of the nation's potato-growing areas have begun plowing under part of their crop in an effort to reverse a potato price decline. An estimated 1,000 acres of potatoes were destroyed in Oregon alone.

The action Thursday in Oregon was apparently in response to a National Farmers Organization (NFO) call for a four per cent cutback. NFO chief Oren Staley was not available and spokesmen at NFO headquarters in Corning, Iowa, declined comment.

However, reports from groups starting potato destruction throughout the country were similar to the comment of Ray Westrick, NFO organizer in Pennsylvania and owner of the state's largest potato farm.

Westrick said his group ordered the potatoes plowed under after a U. S. Department of Agriculture report that about three per cent of the nation's potato crop was surplus.

A statement released by several county NFO officials in Idaho and Washington said the destruction would "save the taxpayers money and avoid having to ask for an expensive diversion program for next year."

Glen Eppich, NFO chairman for Adams County, Wash., said the price of potatoes dropped $15 a ton recently after the government announced there would be a surplus.

"It makes you cry but there's no use raising them if you can't get money for them," said Ed Petrask of Klamath Falls County, Ore., as he watched a disc cut through a lush potato field.

Officials in the Columbia Basin of Washington estimated that 400 to 500 acres were plowed under at a cost to farmers of about $350,000.

In Idaho, the biggest potato producing state in the nation, there were reports of crop destruction in several counties.

Nixon Praised by Indira Gandhi for Peace Efforts

NEW DELHI (AP) — President Nixon arrived in neutralist India Thursday stressing peace and was praised by Prime Minister Indira Gandhi for having "come a long way toward what is our policy" on Vietnam.

Flying in from Bangkok, Thailand, Nixon was cheered by thousands lining the route from the airport and the streets of New Delhi. But the crowds in the 105-degree heat were rather slender.

Friendly as the welcoming was, it was nothing like the tremendous and emotional outpouring of perhaps two million Indians who greeted the late President Dwight D. Eisenhower er a decade ago. And twice Nixon had to ignore small but noisy anti-American demonstrations, something Eisenhower never encountered.

Nixon, in an airport speech, emphasized peace as his administration's goal.

"We want our generation to be remembered as the one in which man first set foot on the moon and as the one in which for the first time in the 20th century we had uninterrupted peace, with justice and freedom for man on earth."

And he told his Indian hosts what they wanted to hear, that the United States wants to work with them "for the goals you believe are best for India, not our goals, but goals in which we all believe."

Mrs. Gandhi, long a critic of U.S. policy in Vietnam, met with Nixon for nearly two hours. Talking with reporters later, she praised him for approaching India's views on Vietnam.

"We have felt from the beginning," she said, "that the Vietnamese should be left without any outside interference. All foreign troops should be withdrawn and from the solution should come lasting peace."

Indian Communists had vowed to turn out in large numbers to demonstrate against Nixon's visit, but few appeared.

On his way in from the airport, Nixon encountered 400 demonstrators carrying black flags and shouting anti-Vietnam war slogans. Nixon ignored them, got out of his bullet-proof limousine, and shook hands with nearby crowds, who cheered him.

The second demonstration was at the memorial to India's famous nonviolence leader, Mohandas K. Gandhi, where Nixon laid a wreath. Near the memorial, several hundred demonstrators waved their fists and shouted "go home" but he ignored them as his car passed by.

Protest demonstrations also were held in Calcutta and Hyderabad.

Those who lined Nixon's route seemed overwhelmingly friendly—so much so that the crowd at one point toppled a concrete fence in the President's direction.

U.S. Secret Serviceman Robert Taylor quickly grabbed Nixon from behind in a bear hug and dragged him out of the way. The President, who had been shaking hands when the fence crumbled toward him, did not return to his limousine until he made sure that none of the spectators had been injured.

Between wreath-laying at the memorial of Gandhi, a tree-planting at the memorial and a state dinner, Nixon conducted his serious business in the splendor of one of the world's most famous palaces.

The Rashtrapati Bhavan—the Indian president's palace where Nixon and his wife stayed—stands in red-and-cream sandstone on a 330-acre estate near downtown New Delhi.

It contains 340 ornately appointed rooms of which one is a 104-foot long banquet hall where Nixon and his wife were entertained Thursday night.

Nixon talked privately with Mrs. Gandhi in the palace during the afternoon while advisers of the two government heads met in a concurrent session.

The heads of government discussed important matters in a general way rather than getting into technical details, presidential press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said.

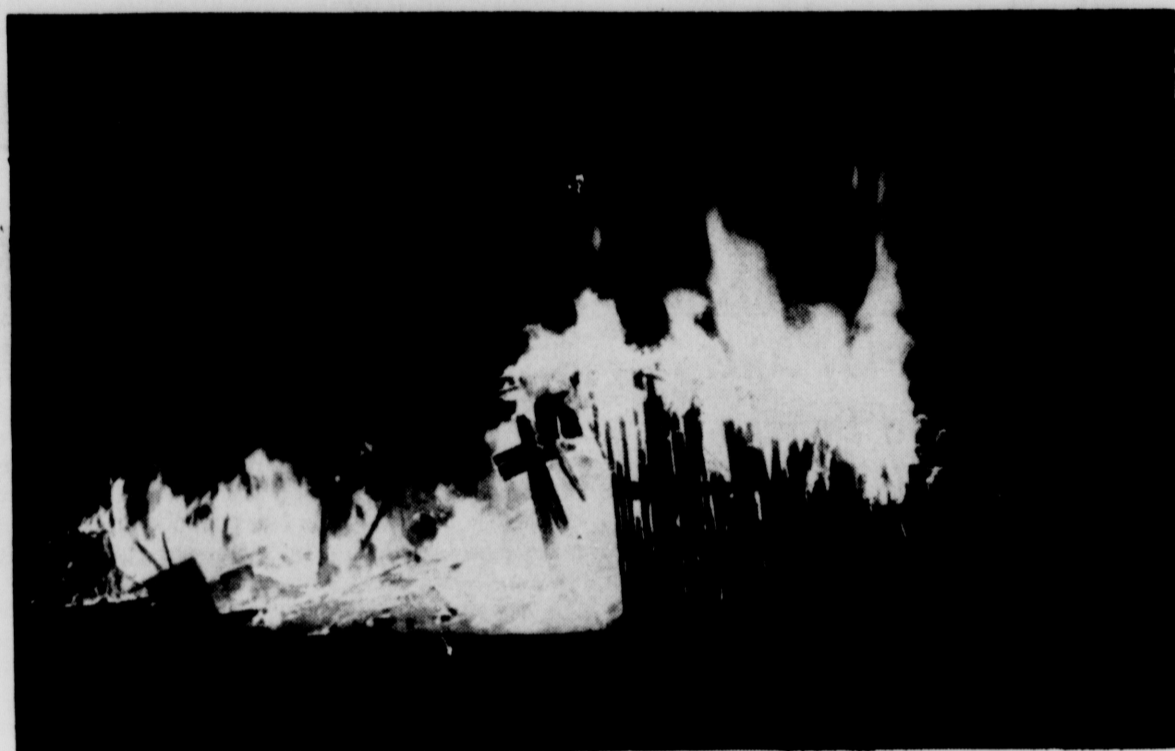

Topics included Nixon's Asian trip, population control, Red China, East-West relations, Asian economic cooperation and development and Vietnam, he reported.

India is chairman of the three-nation International Control Commission set up under the 1954 Geneva agreements to supervise peace and neutrality for Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos. U.S. officials claim the ICC as never functioned effectively because of Communist opposition. The other two members are Canada and Poland.

Mrs. Gandhi said Nixon had not voiced unhappiness with India's ICC role. As for Nixon's interest in having Asian nations join in supervising proposed Vietnamese elections, she saw any Indian participation as "largely hypothetical."

In Mrs. Gandhi's view, a Communist takeover of South Vietnam would not necessarily be as alarming as Washington thinks.

Director Begins Shakeup Of Revenue Department

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The first phase of a shakeup intended to put operations of the State Department of Revenue on a business basis was announced today by the new director, James E. Schaffner.

Effective Aug. 1, he said the officials who have been serving as assistants to the director with nothing but advisory duties will be put back to work as heads of various units in the sprawling department. He will not have any assistant directors.

As the state's largest patronage agency, the department employs about 1,500 persons.

Under Schaffner's plan, the heads of the various units will be responsible for their operation and will report directly to him. Many of the men involved will be going back to their old jobs before a reorganization which Schaffner said apparently was evolved by "a bunch of whiz kids."

The new plan calls for Howard Turnbull to take over his old job as supervisor of the driver's license unit with Peter Scott as his assistant.

R. H. Jordan will again become supervisor of the sales tax unit with an assistant to be appointed later.

Harry Smith will resume his role as supervisor of the motor vehicle registration unit with Walter Opel as assistant.

David Jones will return as supervisor of the income tax unit with Bryan Orburn and Eugene Vaughn as assistants. Schaffner said that under the old system the so-called advisors felt "they had been promoted out of the picture. They had one secretary each and nothing to do. Nobody was working for them."

Schaffner was appointed the new director when David became the first Highway Department Administrator July 1.

Senate Okays A Six-Month Tax Extension

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, rejecting Nixon administration pleas for another full year of the income surtax, voted Thursday to continue the surcharge through Dec. 31 at the present 10 per cent rate.

Democratic leaders said an additional six month extension might be considered later.

A 70-30 vote sent the Senate bill to the House, which voted June 30 to give the administration the full 12-month extension it requested—six months at 10 per cent and another six months at 5.

The action does not come in time to enable the House to pass the measure and send it to President Nixon before a Thursday midnight deadline for payroll withholdings.

Authority for withholdings at the 10 per cent rate ran out June 30, but it was extended through July 31 while Congress wrestled with the problem of continuing the surtax.

Most employers are expected to act on the assumption that the 10 per cent withholding rate will be authorized retroactively, since both branches of Congress have voted extensions.

Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said during the Senate debate that Nixon will sign a six-month extension of the surtax if that is all Congress will give him.

The Senate voted 51 to 48 to attach a six-month extension of the surtax as a rider to a House-passed bill accelerating unemployment compensation taxes.

Then, mustering its full membership of 100, the Senate voted 59 to 41 against an amendment by Sen. John J. Williams, R-Del., which would have continued the surtax through the first six months of 1970, at the lowered rate of 5 per cent.

Williams next moved unsuccessfully to add a provision repealing the 7 per cent investment tax credit for new business plant and equipment, which is part of the House bill.

Again with all members voting, the Senate adopted a motion by Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana to kill the Williams amendment. The vote on this was 66 to 34.

With time running out on the withholding law, the Senate had suspended debate on an antiballistic missile defense system to take up the tax bill.

Mansfield, with the backing of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee, had refused until now to call up the surtax measure until it was coupled with a tax reform bill. He contended that the steam for tax reform would evaporate if the two issues were handled separately.

When he finally agreed Wednesday night to call up the surtax, it was with the understanding that the Senate Finance Committee will produce a tax reform bill by Oct. 31. The House now is working on such a measure.

Japanese with Knife Attacks Secy. Rogers

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese with upraised knife rushed toward Secretary of State William P. Rogers at Tokyo's International Airport Thursday but was overpowered by U.S. and Japanese security guards.

Joseph McNulty, 39, State Department security officer, seized the Japanese when he was within five feet of Rogers and with the help of Japan's security guards subdued him.

During the scuffle, Ambassador Armin H. Meyer, who was at the airport to see Rogers off to Seoul, was thrown to the ground but was unhurt.

The man, Shigetugu Hamaoka, 21, apparently knocked down Meyer while he was rushing at Rogers, police said. But McNulty said he was not sure the man was charging Rogers.

Police said they found a letter on Hamaoka containing comments on demands that the United States return the big base of Okinawa to Japan, a warm issue among Japanese.

They quoted him as saying he had sought to retaliate for U.S. soldiers using bayonets to push back leftist demonstrators on Okinawa in June.

Rogers said he first heard a security officer shout "Oh my God!" then saw some one on top of Hamaoka. He commented: "It was lucky."

Mrs. Rogers, standing near her husband, added: "We certainly were lucky. Next time we'll be looking in all directions."

Rogers had just ended a three-day meeting with U.S. and Japanese Cabinet ministers at which the subject of the return of Okinawa was brought up. He was smiling and unshaken after the incident.

Rogers had just said farewell to Japanese officials when the attack came, so swiftly that some U.S. officials were unaware of it until it was over.

McNulty said he first saw Hamaoka when he rushed through a security line not far from Rogers' plane and ran through the crowd of about 30 U.S. and Japanese officials near the plane.

The weapon, with a six-inch blade, was described by police as a paint scraping knife.

Viet DMZ Scene Of New Fighting

SAIGON (AI) — Fighting broke out near the demilitarized zone Thursday for the second time this week.

The DMZ, which separates the two Vietnams, once was a major battle area in the war but it has been quiet, with only occasional outbursts, since November.

U.S. officials did not view the new fighting in the area with alarm, however.

The battle involved U.S. infantrymen who had gone out to rescue the crew of a U.S. Marine helicopter that had been shot down. In a fight with entrenched North Vietnamese troops, three Americans were killed and 20 were wounded. The Americans reported they killed 13 enemy soldiers.

The helicopter, which was on a medical evacuation mission, had been downed by ground fire only a mile south of the DMZ and southwest of the allied outpost at Con Thien. One crewman was killed and three were wounded.

The U.S. infantrymen and ranks of the 1st Brigade, 5th Mechanized Division succeeded in rescuing the helicopter crew, but then ran into heavy fire.

Helicopter gunships and fighter-bombers swung into action against the enemy positions and the North Vietnamese pulled out after five hours of fighting.

The Marines killed 13 enemy while losing 3 men killed and 10 wounded.

The U.S. Command also reported Thursday two additional "incidents" involving enemy troops operating inside the six-mile-wide zone.

Food Program for Area To Be Discussed Soon

Representatives from the Missouri Valley Human Resources Corporation and the state Division of Welfare plan to meet with members of the Pettis County Court next week to discuss the possibility of setting up a surplus commodity program in Pettis County, according to Aaron Haller, Pettis county court appointee to the MVHRC.

Members of the MVHRC which includes Carroll, Chariton, Lafayette, Pettis, Ray, and Saline Counties, agreed several weeks ago to proceed with the program once state funds became available.

The funds are now available, Haller said.

County courts must approve the program before it can be put into effect. A contractual agreement between the state Division of Welfare and the county court must be signed to authorize the county to distribute surplus commodities, made available by the federal government, to low income needy persons and those who draw public assistance through the state Division of Welfare.

Under the agreement the county court would have to appoint a supervisor to administer the program.

Commodities would be issued as a supplement to a family's food requirement. They are not intended to constitute a complete diet.

Commodities available at the present time include dry beans, print butter, corn meal, flour, corn grits, raisins, rice, shortening, lard, margarine, chopped canned meat, packaged powdered milk, peanut butter, split peas and rolled wheat.

The rate of distribution of the commodities would be established by the state Division of Welfare. Warehousing facilities and distribution

Say Banking Procedure Is Legal

Depositing state money in a Sedalia bank is a normal procedure, in effect long before the Hearnes administration took over, according to Wilbert C. Askew, secretary of the State Fair.

"The account is for convenience only. We take in money from rentals, etc., at the fair grounds every day, then instead of having to drive to Jefferson City to deposit the money at the end of the day, we deposit the money in the Third National Bank until the fund reaches a sizable amount, then we transmit this fund to the Department of Revenue," Askew said.

The check to the Department of Revenue is the only check written on the Sedalia account.

During the fiscal year just ended, the Fair management transmitted a total of $570,000 to the Department of Revenue, in amounts of not less than $100,000 each, Askew's records show. This amount was primarily from proceeds of the Fair last year, and goes into the General Revenue fund, Askew said. Accounts paid by the Fair are paid through the state's fiscal offices in Jefferson City.

The State Fair procedure was revealed after a story appearing in the Kansas City Star edition of July 30 implied that the Department of Agriculture, which administers the Fair, was in violation of state law by depositing money in the Sedalia bank.

Missouri law requires the deposit of all state funds in the state treasury. The treasurer then designates the banks, by contract, to handle active or interest-bearing accounts.

The Sedalia account is inactive, as only one check, and that to the state, is authorized. Consequently, the funds do, as required by law, go to the state treasury for disposition, according to Askew.

"If we did not have this account, for convenience only, someone would have to make a trip to Jefferson City each working day," Askew said.

The existence of the Sedalia account was brought out in a report from the office of Haskell Holman, state auditor.

Welcome Pope Paul VI to Africa

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — The throb of tribal drums and the wail of long, hide-covered horns welcomed Pope Paul VI to the heart of Africa Thursday for a visit that quickly became a mission to bring peace to Nigeria and Biafra, torn by two years of civil war.

No sooner had the 71-year-old Roman Catholic leader landed here on the north shore of Lake Victoria than both sides in the conflict on Africa's west coast agreed at least to talk about a settlement.

The Pope seems to have taken a singular interest in the civil war that has brought death to thousands—many of them children—by reason of the gun or starvation.

On his flight from Italy, Pope Paul told newsmen accompanying him that he intended to bring together on Friday the Nigerian and Biafran delegations who had come to Kampala for his visit. A high Vatican aide said the Pope was willing to stay in Africa a month if this could pave the way to a Nigerian-Biafran peace. He is scheduled to visit Uganda for three days.

Both delegations have agreed to meet here if invited by the pontiff or President Milton Obote, of Uganda, the host.

The official purpose of Pope Paul's visit was to close the first meeting of African bishops and to consecrate the altar of a church dedicated to the first saints and martyrs of black Africa, who died at the end of the 19th century.

Pope Visits Uganda

Kampala, Uganda—Pope Paul VI stands beside Cardinal Laurean Rgwamba, the senior African Cardinal, as they make their way into Kampala from the airport Thursday. The Pope was greeted by thousands of cheering Ugandan Catholics on the occasion of the first visit of a reigning pontiff to the African continent. (UPI)

But the visit, punctuated by the beating of jungle drums and tom-toms, songs dedicated to "His Holiness" and a turnout of around 40,000 people, turned into a full-scale effort to stage another round of Nigerian peace talks.

At Entebbe Airport, Pope Paul was awaited by Chief Anthony Enahoro, one of Nigeria's top negotiators who was with four African heads of state.

The Biafrans were not seen at the airport. Possibly they adhered to diplomatic protocol and remained away from official functions because Uganda does not recognize Biafra, which has broken away from Nigeria.

But a dispatch from Owerri, headquarters for Biafra's leadership, Information Commissioner Ifegwu Eke told a news conference Biafra is ready to negotiate peace without preconditions.

Nigeria's official radio in the past few days has rejected mediation by the Pope.

The 'Big One' Looms Ahead

The last of July is the first of August and on this eve of the transition comes sudden awareness of the limited time left before the "Big One" starts on the Missouri State Fair grounds in Sedalia.

Indeed, there is going to be a state fair this year contrary to all the mournful foreboding about its demise when the Missouri Legislature during its recent period of delirium slashed appropriations for the exhibition. After coming out of a momentary state of shock, fair officials convinced the legislators their portrayal of prolific husbandry was out of character in this instance; hence certain segments of the budgeted requirements were restored.

Therefore, gates will be formally swung open to the public August 16 for ten days of an extravaganza that bids fair to supersede anything heretofore presented to the people of Missouri. The annual premium book of 336 pages issued sometime ago substantiates the prediction that the 67th annual exposition will qualify as the "Big One."

—O—

Some traffic impediments, but not too restrictive, will be encountered because of the current construction work in progress on the last phase of the Urban Highway improvement on South 65 (Limit Avenue) from Ninth street south to the city limits.

Last year visitors were slightly inconvenienced by the West 50 highway improvement now completed.

An unexpected and abundant rainy season hampered and intermittently stopped construction activity on Limit avenue. In one sense this may have been beneficial for fair traffic by delaying major paving work at a time when this artery adjacent the fair grounds needs to be utilized if only partially.

Whatever the status of the construction project two weeks from now, motorists should be patient and mutually courteous toward other drivers in a Sedalia business area where congestion is a recurrent factor on the present two-lane pavement the sides of which are restricted in many places by such obstacles as mounds of dirt, drainage pipes and whatnot.

Remember the highway situation bordering the fair grounds could be worse. Much of it can be avoided by detouring on Clarendon road and Thompson boulevard leading into Sixteenth street.

As usual members of the Missouri Highway Patrol will be on duty to keep traffic moving in all areas around the fairgrounds. Rely on their customary efficiency and courtesy and your digestive tract will be better for it.

Pakistan's U.S. Dollars Down Drain

By DREW PEARSON AND JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Pakistan, which President Nixon visits today, illustrates what happens when you bet your chips on one man or one group of men.

The same thing happened in Pakistan that happened in Peru, where the United States bet on the Peruvian military only to have them turn against us. The same thing could also happen to the Greek military junta.

Early in the Eisenhower administration, John Foster Dulles decided that President Mohammed Ayub Khan of Pakistan was the man to rely on. The son of an old Indian bugler, Ayub had trained at Sandhurst, the British West Point, and was thoroughly anglicized. Dulles decided that Ayub, with his charm and his pro-Anglo-American policy, would be much more reliable than the larger, unwieldy democracy of India.

Accordingly, the United States concentrated on making a friend of Ayub. We invited him several times to visit the USA. We gave him some $5 billion worth of arms. Jackie Kennedy staged a special cruise down the Potomac, with a candlelight dinner on the lawn of Mount Vernon — the first time this had ever been done — in honor of the head man of Pakistan.

And Jackie paid a return visit to Pakistan, during which Ayub gave her a black stallion, and the Pakistan government gave her an emerald, diamond and ruby bracelet.

In return, we expected Pakistan to be a bulwark south of the Himalaya mountains against Russian — and particularly Chinese — penetration of middle Asia.

Instead, Pakistan and India got into the inevitable hassle, and when the United States objected to Pakistan's using America-supplied tanks against India, all the goodwill we had generated with candlelight suppers and billions of dollars of arms went up in smoke.

Shortly thereafter, China began wooing Pakistan; and Pakistan was quite willing to be wooed. Eventually, President Ayub was kicked out by a military junta which was far more dictatorial than his administration. There have been public hangings every day, and Pakistan is in the grip of pro-Chinese propaganda. She has given China air bases with which China has been able to penetrate East Africa; and China is now building two roads to Pakistan, one from Sinkiang province through Ledock, the other from Tibet via Kashmir.

Just before Nixon's visit, China went all out to make sure that Pakistan would not desert the Chinese cause. A gala reception for the Pakistan "Friendship Delegation" was held in Peking, at which time Premier Chou En-lai denounced all plans for selective security in Asia, including those by Russia as well as the United States.

NINETY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Last night Mr. J. K. Yeater used a tub about half full of water for bathing. When he was done with his ablutions, he set it outside the door, but neglected to empty the tub. This morning his little daughter, some two years old, fell into the water and but for the timely aid of Mrs. Yeater, who heard her scream, she would have drowned, as her head was almost submerged while her little feet were sticking up over the edge of the tub. Parents cannot be too careful of their little prattlers.

FORTY YEARS AGO

A bevy of Sedalia girls have returned from an outing at Pertle Springs in Johnson county where they had a cottage and enjoyed numerous pleasures afforded at that resort. While there they visited Miss Jeannette Truitt, a sister of Miss Dorothy Truitt, one of the party. Others on the outing were: Misses Carol Huff, Hazel Lang, Anna Marie Morseman, Roberta Hurt and Rose Brink.

Nixon: A Fresh Approach To the Nation's Problems

By RAY CROMLEY

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA)

There is a spate of stories these days saying that the Nixon administration is leaderless, or drifting, or that it is trying to find its soul.

One day President Nixon is said to be paying his debts to the conservatives, the American Medical Association or the South. The next day he is charged with attempting to appease the "liberals."

Men with Nixon for a long time deny these charges. It is rather that Nixon is a different kind of president from what we are used to.

One major key to his actions, these men say, is that he is as much interested in the means by which an action is accomplished as in the goal itself.

Usually, Nixon's decisions have turned out to be neither more liberal nor more conservative than those of Kennedy or Johnson. It is the approach that has been different. It is over the approaches that some of the major debates have developed.

Take the case of the textile manufacturers who at one point hadn't toed the mark in meeting federal rules on equal opportunities for minorities. One group of men argued that the Pentagon should throw the book at these firms. Another group believed the rules should be eased a bit in view of the situation. Nixon, through Assistant Defense Secretary David Packard, did neither.

Instead, Packard went to top men in the companies involved for long, quiet talks as one businessman to another. Because these men understood that Packard knew business problems and had experience in employing minorities, his words carried respect. Without arm-twisting Packard was able to work out agreements which met the law. The contracts were not canceled. No standards were lowered.

Take the problem of school desegregation. There was a flurry of protest and harsh accusations that Nixon was swinging heavily to the right in fuzzing the deadline dates by which southern schools must have acceptable integration plans or have their federal funds cut off.

A few days later, Nixon was accused of reacting to please the left when Attorney General John Mitchell began a series of legal moves through the courts to force schools in the South and North to comply with the law.

Writers conveniently forgot the court action could not have been in reaction to the clamor raised by the deadline's delay. The cases must, by their very nature and complexity have been in preparation for some time.

So far as this reporter has been able to determine, Nixon in this action was not easing or strengthening the move toward integration. He merely believed, quite possibly because of his own legal background, that an approach through the courts was better.

Turn then to Nixon's actions on voting rights. When analyzed without emotion, Nixon did two things. He said, in effect, that if literacy requirements were unfair for the Negro voter in the South, they were equally unfair to the Negro in the North. He also said that it is wrong in principle to require states to clear their new laws (election or other) with the federal government or courts in advance.

In the U.S. system, the custom is that laws are made and then challenged in the courts, not made by the courts.

Whether he owes a debt to the South or not, Nixon believes that legislation aimed at one region of the country, and not applied to all, is bad legislation on its face.

The original laws on school segregation applied to the 17 southern and border states. Some of the major rights-in-voting laws apply specifically to certain southern states.

Of course, Nixon's approach will not hurt him in the South in 1972 when he comes up for election.

But note that in each case, Nixon's main thrust was to see that the laws apply equally to all parties and all areas and that the laws adhere closely with traditional constitutional practices. He did not attempt to break new ground. This is normally the sort of approach to a problem a court would take. It is highly unusual for a president. This accounts in part for the bewilderment.

South went right up with dummy's ace of clubs and lost no time playing ace and a small diamond. He ruffed the next club, ruffed a diamond and started happily after trumps. When East showed out on the second trump, South stopped to study the hand but the boat had sailed without him. He had to go down one trick.

South remarked, "I guess I bid too much, but the contract was all right. Trumps just never break for me."

The contract was a good one indeed, and South could have made it, bad break and all, if he had just played with a little caution.

At trick two, he should have ruffed a club. Then he could have played ace and another diamond. East would almost surely have won the diamond and would have seen no reason not to lead another club.

South would trump that also, ruff his last diamond in dummy and then lead trumps. East would show out on the second trump lead but that wouldn't hurt South. He would simply lead a spade to dummy's ace, ruff dummy's last club with his last low trump and wind up making all of his six trumps, the three side aces and the diamond ruff in dummy.

West would still make his jack of trumps but he would ruff his partner's good spade with it.

Of course, there was some risk to this line of play. West, given only a few clubs, together with three trumps to the jack, might overruff a club to set an otherwise lay-down contract. Furthermore, the hand still could have been beaten if East had just led a trump instead of a club when he got in with the diamond. South would never be able to score his three small trumps.

Q—Which is the only U.S. coin bearing the likeness of a foreign monarch?

A—The commemorative 25-cent piece dated 1893 bearing the likeness of Queen Isabella of Spain.

Q—What baseball team first received regular salaries for professional services?

A—The Cincinnati Red Stockings in 1869.

Q—How many of our presidents were given Biblical names?

A—Twenty-one of the 36 presidents were given Biblical names. Five were named James—the name most frequently given.

Soviet, Not U.S., Viewed As Main Threat by China

By LEON DENNEN
NEA Foreign News Analyst

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (NEA)

Ever since Russia's Communist chief Leonid Brezhnev proposed the creation of a system of collective security in Asia, Peking has been hinting at the "imminence" of war between Red China and the Soviet Union.

There is nothing the Chinese fear more than a strong Soviet presence in what they regard as their sphere of influence.

President Nixon's journey to Asia seems to have confirmed their suspicions that eventually the two nuclear nations, Russia and the United States, will ignore their differences in a joint effort to "encircle" China.

However, Moscow and not Washington is regarded as the main threat by the Chinese. Western diplomats who recently visited Peking told this writer in Europe that Premier Chou En-lai was convinced that war with Russia was imminent.

"Contrary to what some experts might think in the West a reconciliation between the two powerful Communist nations is not in the cards," one diplomat said.

"The Chinese would rather swallow the bitter pill and seek a rapprochement with the United States than bow to what they consider as Moscow's imperialism."

This also is the view of an important Soviet educator who recently found asylum in the West. "The Russian-Chinese conflict has long ceased to be merely a propaganda or paper war," he warned.

All along the Russian-Chinese border of 4,000 miles, propaganda charges and countercharges are increasingly backed by troop reinforcements and escalating armed skirmishes.

According to Soviet broadcasts to Asia, Mao Tse-tung's "propaganda machine" is continuing its unrelenting anti-Soviet hysteria and incitement to war frenzy in China.

Peking, in turn, has again accused the Russians of repeated violations of Chinese territory, especially along the Sinkiang frontier, home of China's nuclear power.

The Chinese even claim that the Russians are resorting to germ warfare by "releasing thousands of infected mice" on their territory. According to the Soviet defector, this claim, fantastic though it may seem, should not be dismissed lightly in the West.

The Russians are believed to have some 350,000 troops on the Chinese border and 300 medium-range nuclear missiles. Peking may have even more soldiers but less-advanced weapons.

So far Moscow has been unable to convince other members of the Soviet-dominated Warsaw Pact Organization to send even observers to the Far East as a gesture of their support for Russia.

But the Kremlin leaders are reported to have created a Viet Cong-type "national liberation army" of Uighurs, Kazakhs, Uzbeks and other Buddhist and Moslem peoples who inhabit much of Soviet Central Asia.

Armed and trained by Red army officers, this army is led by Gen. Zenon Tayipov, a former officer of the Chinese army of Uighur origin, who deserted to Russia.

In the view of some Western diplomats, Gen. Tayipov has been designated as the premier of an "independent" Eastern Turkestan Republic should Sinkiang again become a Soviet-dominated province.

Peking is obviously aware of the activities of Moscow's guerrillas. "The Soviet revisionist renegade clique has gone so far as to organize youth in regions bordering on China into special organizations and give them military training," said China's People Daily.

According to reports of Western intelligence, the Russian-Chinese border clashes have produced panic in Central Asia. People living near the Chinese border who are of non-Soviet ethnic origin (Greeks, Turks, Persians, etc.) have come under the surveillance of the secret police, KGB.

These people have begun hoarding food and other goods and the Soviet authorities are powerless to quell the rising tide of panic.

Best to Cook Meats, Wash All Vegetables

By WAYNE G. BRANDSTADT, M.D.

Q—Since protein is an important element of diet, how can a strict vegetarian get enough of it to maintain his health?

A—If a vegetarian allows himself some milk and cheese daily, he can do very nicely. Some vegetarians also eat eggs, which are a rich source of protein but do not come from a slaughterhouse. Those who take no food of animal origin are seriously handicapped because, like it or not, the human digestive tract is not designed for hay burning.

Q—Do farmers spray chemicals on vegetables? If so, must they be washed before we eat them? Is it dangerous to eat raw beef or pork?

A—Such vegetables as green beans and tomatoes that grow above the ground are likely to be sprayed with insecticides. They should be washed before you eat them. Raw beef and pork may contain tapeworm eggs and raw pork may contain the larvae of trichinella. Cook them.

Q—Does drinking orange juice make a person grow?

A—Orange juice is a rich source of vitamin C. It is essential for healthy teeth, gums, bones and blood vessels but it will not increase your stature.

Q—What effect does eating hot peppers and spices have on your stomach?

A—Primarily, it starts the flow of the gastric juice. Most natives of the tropics seem to thrive on these condiments but persons with colitis and other digestive troubles might do well to compare the effect of putting pepper in their eyes with that of putting it in their stomachs.

Q—After reading about the effect of coffee on one's heart, kidneys and nerves, I cut myself down to one cup a day. I slept better but I got headaches so I switched to Postum. What effect does Postum have on one's system?

A—Headaches are a common symptom of caffeine withdrawal and are the reason many persons prefer not to develop a dependence on the stimulant. Postum is a cereal beverage that contains no caffeine and is completely harmless unless you are allergic to wheat.

Q—Could eating peppermint candy every day for many years be harmful?

A—Only to your teeth.

George Washington never resided in the White House.

Here's a Simple Way To Get Worms for Fishing

By POLLY CRAMER

DEAR POLLY—One day my father dumped some old soap on the lawn and, to my surprise, worms started wriggling to the surface. My brother, Chris, explained that as the soap sinks down into the ground it forces the worms out. We now take some soap along when we go fishing.—MARILANI

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY—My husband bowls in several leagues and the bowling shirts furnished by sponsors have advertising on them. What do I do with all these shirts when the season is over? There is still a lot of wear in them. I wonder if there is a way to remove the advertising (sprayed on and through the fabric) so these shirts can be worn on other occasions. It seems such a waste not to use otherwise perfectly good shirts.—GLENNA

DEAR POLLY—My husband's mother is confined to a wheelchair with her legs elevated. She could not manipulate a lap tray and a tray at the side of her chair was too inconvenient. I hit on the idea of opening up my sewing machine and using the lid at the side for a table under which her elevated leg can be pushed. It is solid and lessens the chance of an accidental spill.—MRS. H. W.

DEAR POLLY—When hemming a dress or skirt, instead of using rayon seam binding use a piece of lace edging about one-inch-wide and attach the same way. You will find it so soft and pliable and it has no puckers. I have just hemmed two summer cotton dresses this way and I am sold.—MRS. W. A.

Dispute Ended With Shootings

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Investigators say a dispute over enforcement of safety factors led to the gunshot deaths of three men at Lockheed-California Co.'s Burbank plant.

When the shooting ended Wednesday, a supervisor, a union leader and another valued, longtime employee lay dead.

Isaac Jernigan Jr., 29, of Los Angeles, was booked on suspicion of murder. A spokesman for the Lockheed complex—which builds both military and commercial aircraft—said Jernigan had a record of insubordination, especially failure to observe rules designed to prevent workers from possible injury or death.

Officers said foreman Jan. H. Domonoske reprimanded Jernigan Wednesday for refusing to wear safety glasses in an area of the template shop where they both worked.

Observers told officers that a dispute ensued and Jernigan used a .38-caliber revolver to shoot Domonoske, also 29, of nearby Glendale, twice—once in the chest and once in the head.

Investigators said Jernigan—apparently having learned that the union had approved of Domonoske's position—ran three quarters of a mile to headquarters of Lodge 727 of the International Association of Machinists. At the hall, police were told, Jernigan asked to see Thomas McNett, 55, of North Hollywood, president and founder of the 12,000-member lodge. McNett had been with a group of retired unionists in an adjoining patio and was talking with two women.

Those present said Jernigan yelled, "Mr. McNett?" They said that when the union leader turned, he was struck by three bullets.

Police said the third victim, Leonard E. Nolan, 52, a Lockheed tool planner from Burbank, was shot when he tried to prevent the gunman's escape.

Jernigan was taken into custody a few minutes later. He offered no resistance.

Food

centers in the county must be approved by the state.

All people on public assistance in the county would automatically be eligible to participate in the program by making application to the commodity supervisor.

Other needy persons would also be eligible based on the number in the family, total monthly income, and total liquid assets. A single person with a monthly income of $140 or less and total liquid assets of $750 or less would be eligible. For two people the total monthly income must not be over $190 and total liquid assets over $1,500.

For each additional person in a family $40 more is allowed in total monthly income but liquid assets never exceed $1,500. Identification cards would be issued to each family participating in the program and a recertification of all non-public assistance households would be made every 90 days.

The county would have to assume the responsibility for all costs in connection with the receipt, handling, storage, processing, refrigeration, and the issuance of commodities. However, the state would reimburse the county 50 percent each month if the expenditures were approved.

According to figures released by Ray Fergusson, commodity distribution supervisor for the state Division of Welfare, there are 1,746 people on welfare in Pettis County at the present time.

Of these 1,746 people, 905 are on public assistance, 562, aid to dependent children; 90 general relief, 142, permanently and totally disabled; and 47, aid to the blind and blind pension.

Fergusson has estimated that the annual budget for a commodity program in Pettis county would be $14,666.40.

Others planning to attend the meeting with the county court besides Haller and Fergusson are Harry Naugel, city appointee to the MVHRC, and Charles Thomas, director of employment opportunity and outreach for the MVHRC.

Administrator Is Appointed For Boonslick

The Boonslick Regional Library Board of Trustees this week appointed Richard Parker as administrative librarian to fill the position left by the death of Charles A. Repp. Parker has been with Boonslick since June, 1968 as the librarian and will now assume the responsibility of the three county regional library.

The board also established a Charles A. Repp Memorial Fund. The president of the board appointed a committee to decide in what manner this fund would be used.

Omitted One Detail In Ship's Replica

NEW YORK (AP) — Thor Heyerdahl says he omitted a detail shown in 4,000-year-old Egyptian drawings when constructing the papyrus boat Ra and it may have led to the disabling of the craft during its attempted Atlantic crossing.

He said the pictures and murals of Egyptian craft showed a line running from the boat's stern to the deck. Because they could not figure out its purpose, they left the line off when building the Ra.

During their two-month voyage from Safi, Morocco, they discovered that waves broke over the stern and made it hard to navigate. The line would have kept the stern high and out of the waves, Heyerdahl said.

The seven-man crew abandoned the foundering Ra 600 miles short of their destination in the Barbados because of the seas breaking over the stern, damage to the mast and a starboard list.

Living Cost Rise Is Slowing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American consumer may be seeing a glimmer of light at the end of the long tunnel of inflation as new government figures indicate the soaring cost of living is slowing down.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Wednesday a dramatic reduction in the upward rate of wholesale prices, most significantly in the cost of cattle.

Statistics showed cattle prices for the month that ended July 15 were down $1.60 per hundred-weight from the mid-June figure of $29.60—an 18-year high.

In anticipating this drop, Agriculture Department economists said earlier in the week a fall off in the cost of cattle would lead to some reduction in the price of meat sold over the butcher counter.

However, several notes of caution have been introduced.

"You have to be careful about placing too much significance in one month's figures, but it does seem fairly significant," Arnold Chase, assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, said.

And, Chase went on, it could be several months, perhaps not until October, before the drop in cattle prices will percolate down to the housewife in the form of lower meat costs.

Other, nongovernment, economists also entered a pessimistic note, saying consumer demand—fed by inflation and rising spending power—could override the cattle price drop at the retail level.

Last month, the average price for choice sirloin steak was $1.40 a pound—representing a 4.5 per cent jump over the previous month's cost of meat, poultry and fish. Last December sirloin cost $1.20 a pound.

A beef industry expert predicted earlier this week, "I don't think anybody in this country can expect to see $1 round steak again, and certainly not less than about $1.39 for sirloin."

Another problem affecting the outlook for lower meat prices is the possibility that increased processing and marketing costs will offset any immediate decline in cattle prices.

And some experts say the consumer should not be too encouraged by predictions that after holding steady for the last half-year cattle production will increase over the next six months.

For one thing, they point out, pork supplies are expected to decrease, which means the demand for beef will go up, resulting in stronger cattle prices.

Kiwanians See Slides Of London

Colored slide views of historic spots in London were shown to Sedalia Kiwanians by Wray and Clay Schroeder, Sedalia businessmen, at the club's meeting in Bothwell Hotel Thursday noon. Wray gave the narration. The scenes were part of those taken on a tour by the brothers through eight European countries.

Robert Gardner was program chairman, introducing the Schroeders.

President Roy Brown asked members to stand for a moment of silent prayer in memory of L. A. Pharris, former past president and lieutenant governor.

A roll call was taken for the annual Kiwanis Ladies Night summer picnic which will be held at the Parkhurst Tiki House at 7 o'clock Thursday night, August 7, to which guests may be invited.
